The Adventures of...

Rocket Man

by Doug Smith

'Bat, Ball and Bible'

Whatever your plans for Sunday, stop in the name of the law. Unless it involves churchly endeavors, your agenda may well have been prohibited about 100 years ago.

And especially if it involved baseball.

In the whimsically titled "Bat, Ball & Bible," Cortland State Prof. Charles DeMotte seriously chronicles the quest to keep the national pastime on a six-day schedule in the Empire State.

He's not kidding, folks. On Aug. 6, 1893, the Buffalo Bisons sought to avoid prosecution by playing a Sunday game on virtually uninhabited Grand Island, transporting the fandom by steamship. There weren't enough spectators to today fill a No. 40 bus and while the Herd beat Binghamton, 12-4, it lost a bundle; for baseball on Grand Island, it was one and done.

Prof. DeMotte does not include this misadventure, although he does reference the late Bison historian Joe Overfield. "BB&B" chronicles club owners' schemes to escape the rundown of the law. Some would schedule a ballpark church service, pass the collection plate a couple of times and then offer the game for free. Others offered free admission but mandated purchase of a scorecard.

Even Ernie Banks couldn't have played two under those conditions.

The point the professor makes is that it all reeked of hypocrisy. Before artificial lighting and a five-day work week, Sunday offered blue collars their only shot at baseball attendance. Yet pursuits of the privileged, such as golf, tennis and boating, continued with impunity. To Prof. DeMotte, that added the insult of mandated activities to the injury of a long week at the grindstone.

While he doesn't belabor the point, the author also suggests the so-called "blue laws" as a means of keeping the workers in line - in church, where most of the clergy would preach a work ethic, as opposed to the ballpark, where they might actually get to exchanging gripes and come to the realization that they were being badly used by their employers.

Not all the faithful lobbied against Sunday baseball. A movement called Muscular Christianity preached that the lessons learned in keeping fit for competition were almost as vital as those acquired in the sanctuary.

One "compromise" proposed limiting Sunday baseball to a three-hour time slot. That sure would pinch today's Yankees. One judge dismissed charges, saying the game in question was so badly played that it didn't even qualify as baseball. In Buffalo, a priest changed Mass hours so as to accommodate ballgame attendance, declaring that God was in the sunshine as well as the church.

Prof. DeMotte fairly compares the debate to such modern issues as, for example, same-sex marriage, with base-playing of a political sort.

While scholarly, with enough footnotes for a novelette, "BBB" reads well, grammatically pristine, with such detail that an obsessive editor starts looking for insignificant errors just to prove that he's paying attention. Rocket Man found only a team missing in a long-ago International League, Washington misplaced to the National League in 1906 and a misspelling of Chautauqua.

On any day of the week, that's practically a perfect game.

Go Back to School with University Express This Fall

Go "Back to School" with University Express this Fall! Remember how much fun learning is? You'll enjoy University Express, a unique lifelong learning program coordinated by the Erie County Retired & Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) and Dept. of Senior Services. Instructors are retired faculty and other professionals who volunteer to teach one hour classes at senior centers.

Classes are FREE, and open to all Erie County residents age 55 and over! If you're interested in WNY history, find out about Buffalo's towering grain elevators, the people who worked in them, and the surrounding First Ward, including one of the most famous residents, General "Wild Bill" Donovan; explore Buffalo from the water and the air.

Classes cover maritime history as well as aviation history of the region. Learn why Olmsted called Buffalo the "best-planned city in the world." Buffalo was home to cultural greats such as Charles Burchfield and Mark Twain, and our jazz scene included names from Billie Holiday to Count Basie.

Explore in depth world events in the news: Immigration Law; Uneasy Neighbors - Pakistan and India; Confucianism and Modern China are a few topics this semester.

If you enjoy history, literature or art, University Express offers opportunity to learn more about Franklin and Eleanor during the War Years, Robert Frost, History of Allegheny Park, McCarthyism's Effect on 1950's Culture, and the political context behind Alice In Wonderland.

Other topics include: Coyotes, Evolution, Ethics of Eating Meat vs. Vegetarian, Food as Medicine, Tips for Healthy Aging, Communicating across Generation Gaps, Finding Your Immigrant Ancestors, Digital Photography 101, and much more.

The senior years are not a time to slow down and stop learning - it's a time for older adults to delve into areas of knowledge, find new interests, and put greater depth into their lives.

RSVP and University Express has the goal of making lifelong learning accessible in WNY. Find the full catalog at www.erie.gov/rsvp or call RSVP at 858-7548 to have one mailed.

Classes start October 1 and run through December, held at Amherst Senior Center, Baptist Manor in Buffalo, Canterbury Woods in Williamsville, Cheektowaga Senior Center, Clarence Senior Center, Orchard Park Senior Center, and now also SCENE in Springville.

Eye Tests Are Free At Local Auto Bureaus

As many area motorists will have their driver licenses expire over the next few years, Erie County Clerk Chris Jacobs encourages motorists to renew their licenses at one of the many conveniently located Auto Bureaus throughout Erie County.

Motorists should renew locally for two main reasons, says Jacobs, "First, renewing locally keeps fee revenue here in Erie County instead of all the money going to Albany and second, local auto bureaus don't charge an extra fee for an eye test like several retail chains are doing around the county. We say keep renewal fee money local and keep that $10 dollars in your pocket by coming to one of our Auto Bureaus!" says County Clerk Jacobs.

"A $10 surcharge for a simple vision screening, which takes less than a minute to administer, will increase the overall cost for renewing a driver's license by more than 15 percent," said Jacobs. "If all residents in Erie County renewed their license and registration locally we would keep over $2 million more dollars a year here in Erie County instead of going to the State coffers in Albany, this revenue could be used to fund libraries, roads and hold down taxes," said Jacobs.

Eye tests are free at local auto bureaus.

Erie County has six locations throughout Erie County. To find the location closest to you go to www.erie.gov/clerk or contact the Auto Bureau Call Center at (716) 858-7450.
