Winter Parking Rules Take Effect on November 15th

Buffalo winter bus route restrictions take effect on November 15, 2014. There is no parkin on any bus route in the CItY of Buffalo between the hours of 1:30 am and 7 am from November 15, 2014 through and including April 1, 2015. This will allow sno plows to clear area roadways after sno storms. To find the winter parking regulations for a specific street, visit www.city-buffalo.com. Citizens who want to be informed of a snow or weather emergency are encouraged to sign up for the City of Buffalo Co-deRED Emergency Notification System, which allows the city to send out telephone calls, text messages, emails, or other digital alerts to a targeted area. To register, log on to www.city-buffalo.com and follow the link to the "Co-deRED Community Notification Enrollment" page.

Protect Your Property from Halloween Vandalism

Halloween is a time for ghosts and ghouls and scary things, and sometimes the occasional vandal. To protect your property from being vandalized, Buffalo residents are encouraged to hang signs at their homes to promote the City of Buffalo's recommended Halloween trick-or-treating cut-off policy. Neighborhoods that have used the following recommended actions have reported a drastic decline in incidents of mischief and vandalism:

- Halloween is for children in costumes. To minimize the safety risks that occur when older kids go door-to-door until late at night, a cut-off time of 8:00 pm for trick-or-treating is recommended.

- Do not turn off your lights and pretend you are not home. This is an open invitation for vandalism and mischief. Instead, keep your house well lit and post a sign that you are out of candy.
- A strong adult presence will serve as a deterrent to potential mischief. Work with your block club or neighbors to have some adults patrol your neighborhood with flashlights in "strolling neighborhood watch teams," while other adults sit outside on their porches.

Should you see any suspicious activity, call 911. Do not attempt to handle the situation yourself.

Farewell Floral Explorations

Floral Explorations will bid its final farewell this week after being on Hertel Avenue for 22 years. Sue and Dave Whalen had to make the difficult decision due to a steady decline in local business.

Sue has been an active contributor to the Hertel North Buffalo Business Association in addition to her amazing floral arrangements over the years. Dave says "Thank you North Buffalo for 22 years."

The Adventures of...
Rocket Man
 by Doug Smith

“Old Jokes”

As Rocket Man's beloved Aunt Mollie's awaited her Final Promotion, she beckoned his ear to her pillow. He anticipated words of farewell or perhaps some advice on life as she had lived it so well.

Instead, she told him a raunchy joke about an Episcopal clergyman.

In the four decades he had known this remarkable spinster, successful businesswoman and feminist for her times, he had never heard an unprintable word, nor did he here, now, it was all about circumstances. With a bit of eye leakage he replayed this moment Thursday night as “Old Jews Telling Jokes” left ‘em giggling in the aisles at the Jewish Center.

Five of the area's finest, some decidedly outside the ethnic demographic (DiVincenzo, anyone?) took their turns unearthing comic spiels, some dating back to the original burning-bush campfire. Rocket Man traced one about a vegetable to the Reagan administration, another to Kelli Bock-Natale's take on Sophie Tucker.

Some were new, at least to him. About a third could not be repeated in the Rocket, and a few wouldn't even pass the taste test at Hustler. About half drew on stereotypical guilt, angst, inter-generational strife and a preference for suffering peculiar to the subset of “Jewish humor.” The rest could fit almost anybody.

A significant percentage unfolded on desert islands. Some personified pithy (lisp optional), others rambled on like dogs as shaggy as Sasquatch. Ingredients ran the gamut: D batteries, tax, ketchup bottles, sheep, teddy bears, feminine hygiene products, parachutes and a liberal sprinkling of bodily fluids. Rocket Man recycled a few at the hairdressers' the following day and was crowned a comic genius. They ain't brain surgery.

But the construction is. There is a theme, way below the surface, about the capacity of humor to trump misery. This lesson is fervently taught by agile, mismatched jokesters – the avuncular everyman Saul Elkin, the scraggy and impish Robert Rutland, the inventive Todd Benzin, the beautifully aged-up earth mother Christina Rausa and, especially, the defiantly flat-accented Josie DiVincenzo, who in her last show here brought down the house 13 times in a very different way.

On the other hand, don't pack the knee pads, it's seldom slappingly funny. Rocket Man diagnoses a tendency to postscript the punch line with a shrug, a mumble, or some other concession that comedy has been committed. Rocket Man holds that the secret ingredient of comedy is brevity, total denial that a joke has been told.

Directors Elkin and Tom Loughlin may have encouraged this style, as a way of emphasizing the vitality of laughter in all our lives – and deaths. Aunt Mollie sure knew.

Rocket Man and First Mate fueled their funny-bones with another nosh at the Tel Aviv Café, stuffed acorn squash and salmon paella. Life is more than bagels and lox. “Telling Jokes” continues through November 16th at the Seller Theater, 2640 North Forest Rd., Getzville. SEVEN ROCKETS (out of 10).

Imitation

They say that imitation is the finest form of flattery. Suppose in most cases that is true and the party imitated should feel honored. Unless of course the imitator is the competition. Like the television lawyers that we see so much. William Mat-tar was clever with his phone numbers being all fours. It must have cut into the competition as they promptly changed their phone number to all eights. Guess in a way it is nice to know what you do, is so good, it has to be copied, even by those who you would prefer not to.

A case close to home is our Kiwanis fund raiser. We have for the last 20 years helped send physically and mentally challenged children to Cradle Beach for a week, by sponsoring a football pool. The entire proceeds going into helping this great event happen. Other Kiwanis clubs in the area honored our project and even though it is a successful avenue to raise funds, did not choose to cut into the local customer base. Until recently when a neighboring Kiwanis club decided to go head to head with our project and use this as one of their fund raisers. I would have no problem with it at all if the total money raised went to the same charity, as I find it most worthwhile. Unfortunately that is not the case. So even though they said to us, "imitation is the finest form of flattery" I do not find it so. Maybe so in business but not when it is honor amongst fellow non-profit groups. Sometimes your ethics speak louder than money.

One other imitation, if it is that, is the weekly trivia questions I have been placing in the Rocket for the last few months, call "How well do you know Buffalo". It has gone over really well and has done a lot to increase the readership in the Rocket. It is an enjoyment and I like when people come and mention it to me. Feels like an accomplishment and it has helped our weekly publication.

Well, recently "Business First", a rather successful weekly paper, has come out with a "How well do you know Western New York" trivia offering. I like it as if it is a spinoff of my weekly production then I am honored. Doing a trivia every week is time consuming and even though it is fun, it has been a commitment as it is now looked for. So when I saw this I was pleased, even though it may have nothing to do with my entry, I still liked it and tried to answer the questions.

Most were multiple choice questions so the answers were there. All you had to do was pick the correct one. There were 50 questions and I got about half right. Ten were people from the area, not necessarily Buffalo, who I never heard of. Mostly literary people of whom I have no clue. Except Warren Spaun the pitcher and I even got that wrong. I thought he was from Niagara Falls. A lot of the questions I knew as they were similar to mine, especially about Grover Cleveland and Millard Fillmore. All in all I did poorly as they asked specific dates and I was close on many but not close enough. Like the year the metro rail was finished? I remember it happening, but the exact year? I was off by two years. I think you could get it on the internet so look it up and try it. Let me know how you do as you have to be better than me.
