

IndieSound At Black Rock Set For September 29th

Second annual IndieSound music festival to take place on Saturday, Sept. 29th.

Buffalo First, The Good Neighborhood and the Grant-Amherst Business Association held a mixer at Sportsmen's Tavern today to announce that Amherst Street and Historic Black Rock will host the second annual IndieSound music festival, to take place on Saturday, September 29th.

The mission of IndieSound is to help residents of Buffalo and Western

New York find and connect with locally owned businesses and independent local artists. By connecting indie-conscious people with local businesses, the festival works to strengthen the health of Main Street ecosystems across the region.

The festival's inaugural year featured live musical performances from over forty local musicians in independent businesses throughout the historic Allentown business district.

Presented by Buffalo First and The Good Neighborhood in association with the Grant-Amherst Business Association, this year's festival will showcase Amherst Street's renaissance through IndieSound @ Black Rock on Saturday, September 29th, highlighting burgeoning businesses, emerging leaders in the arts, and the proud heritage that has made Amherst Street in Historic Black Rock a destination for over a century.

Musical performances will occur from 12-5pm at local businesses up and down Amherst Street, including Sportsmen's Tavern, Joe's Service Center, 464 Gallery, Rohall's Corner, and Artsphere Gallery. Coordinated evening events will begin at 5pm.

For a complete list of venues and musicians, or to become a participating business or sponsor, please visit www.buffalo-first.org/indiesound or call (716) 725-6100.

Elmwood Festival Of The Arts Takes Place This Weekend

This year marks the 13th annual Elmwood Festival of the Arts, and it's better than ever! With more than 170 artists and craftspeople selling work done in 16 different mediums, you're sure to find something you love. See over fifty performances on three stages and dance at the family friendly dance tent.

Bring the family to Kidsfest, where children can do hands-on arts projects, see kids-oriented performances, and march in Sunday's Kidsfest parade. Environmentalism is a huge part of this year's mission and Environmental Row is a big part of that, featuring booths demonstrating things that we can do to help sustain the planet. In addition, two of the stages will be solar powered this year.

Cultural Row features over 30 local and regional organizations working

Academic Enrichment Program At Our Lady Of Black Rock School

For five weeks during July and August, several students from grades 3-7 were invited to participate in the school's Summer Academic Enrichment Program. This program was designed and implemented by our Title 1 Teacher, Ms. Erin Cappello.

The learning objectives for each age group focused on strengthening reading comprehension and writing skills. All instruction was aligned with the New Common Core Standards for reading and writing. Students chose a non-fiction topic and were required to engage in reading books and using on-line research to support their topic.

After using their cited resources to put together a written report on paper, the students were given the choice of using their information to create a bound book, or use integrate technology to create an animated video.

What was most unique about this program was the fact that students were given a choice as to how they would present their learning. As Ms. Cappello stated, "This was a five week program where CHOICE equaled MOTIVATION. It was designed to let students have choice in what they were reading and writing. The goal of the program was to not only promote, reading and writing, but to build confidence and a new perspective."

Students used state-of-the-art technology to create lively animated videos that

'Jim Baker's New Book'

You can take the boy out of Buffalo but you can never take Buffalo out of the boy, not even after three decades.

And so it is that Jim Baker, sports and TV columnist for the Courier-Express (and a Rocket alumni, too), has written and released "Buffalo Bills IQ," sub-titled "The Ultimate Test of True Fandom," a 200-question trivia book for local football fanatics.

A little remindful of the movie "Diner" in which a Baltimore Colts fan subjects his fiancée to a Colts trivia quiz (she fails; the wedding's off), Baker's book covers nearly the full range of local pro football, much of it off the field, to wit:

Why did coach Lou Saban, after a particularly galling defeat, accuse a Buffalo newspaper of employing a "Police Gazette" photo spread?

Who was the Bills' original radio voice?

Why did an out-of-town hotel clerk tell owner Ralph Wilson that the team had not yet arrived?

But there's more than trivia in "Bills IQ." The book offers eight 25-question segments, each preceded by a thumbnail biography of a team notable. The description of Marv Levy is remarkable, that of "OJ" matter-of-fact and no-nonsense. They're great reads and, sometimes, include clues.

Available in most bookstores, we imagine, or perhaps through www.blackmesabooks.com, "Bills IQ" reflects the diligence and energy with which Baker covered both the Bills and local broadcasting for so many years before the Courier's closing (September, 1982). The Boston Herald snapped him up and he became every bit as influential in Beantown as here, and even after retirement, was still play-by-playing Bay State high school athletics.

But a few moments talking with Baker makes it clear that he's a Buffalonian through and through. After 30 years in a new locale, most acquire, at least in self-defense, its accent. Not Jim Baker. He's still the guy who was born here, grew up here (although some might question that he ever grew up at all) and bled the colors of every local team, although, to tell the truth, some of that blood might have been let by his skillful literary knives.

Rocket Man saw his first Bills game in 1947, coming up by train from Jamestown to watch the old All-American Conference team take on the Chicago Rockets (no kidding). Only a fan of modest intensity (he tends not to trust games for which they can't afford a round ball), he subjected himself to the Baker quiz and scored 144, so we're not getting married, either.

So it's fair, fun and, a dozens of pre-games halftimes to come, evoking once again the names of Wray Carlton, Buster Ramsey and Elbert Dubenion, a tribute to the city, to its team and, after all, its loyal and dedicated author.

"Remember, It Could Be Worse!"

Sometimes, during the Italian Festival on Hertel, it rains. It sure puts a damper on the activities and delays the good times people have there. But some of us may remember this scene on Hertel a few years back. We are looking at, believe it or not, Hertel Avenue and Homer. Smack in the middle of where the festival is held. Imagine if something like that happened during the festival.

Just so you know, if you are not a long time resident, the sewer has been fixed and the problem that was, is no longer there. The whole street has been torn up and redone to accommodate the water that runs down Hertel from Main St. to this low spot on the avenue.

This is the spot where the water was the deepest. That did not mean that other areas were not affected. All the basements were flooded right to the ceilings. The damage was enormous and the after effects were felt for months. All those hundreds of business and residential flooded areas had to be cleaned out and disposed of to prevent diseases. It was not a total disaster, but it sure was a catastrophe. At the time, we were located over a block away at Delaware and Tacoma, and we had water in our basements. Like I said, the problem has been addressed and the chance it could happen again does not exist. Kind of reminds me of New Orleans. They knew it could happen, but until it does, nothing is done. Let's not get into the Peace Bridge thing again!

Past flooding on Hertel Ave. caused major damage to homes and businesses.

Who can give me the date of this particular flood? JBORTZE@AOL.com included music and images, along with the students' own photos and text infused into them. Mrs. Eadie, the Principal at Our Lady of Black Rock said, "I am very impressed by what our students have achieved this summer. Their animated videos were so visual and engaging. The students were both excited and proud of what they learned. The Open House for parents on the last day of class was a wonderful opportunity for our students to share this learning with their families. I can see why the students were so motivated in doing these projects. We live in a digital world, so giving our children opportunities to engage them in purposeful learning like this help them to be more confident as 21st Century Learners."

Ms. Cappello added, "I really wanted to show our students that reading is an activity that can be enjoyed rather than loathed."

After observing the students working throughout their classes during this program, it was evident that the students enjoyed what they did with the added benefited of learning objectives that ultimately strengthened their reading comprehension and writing skills.

There's a lot to fix

It's time to put an experienced, persistent, and independent voice back in Albany!

As a former State Senator, I was known for my willingness to take on the big issues. I'd built a reputation for holding the government's feet to the fire, fighting to balance the priorities of how we raise money, and how we spend it.

New York State needs to get its priorities right. There are politicians and special interests that want to raise a fast buck by pumping millions of gallons of cancer causing ingredients into the ground. Ironically, many of these are the same people that voted to reduce the research funding for Roswell Park Cancer Institute. With the growing demand for health care, we should be investing and creating more jobs, not cutting.

A recent Buffalo News editorial framed this issue perfectly:

"Because of policies adopted in Albany, New York owns one of the nation's worst business climates. Its electric rates are among the highest. The cumulative tax bill paid by New Yorkers is one of the nation's highest."

"Gov. Andrew M. Cuomo swept into office pledging to attack the Albany monster that has devoured the state's prosperity and, for the most part, he has been as good as his word. But years of unwise policies have allowed destructive forces to seep into just about every facet of life in New York. Cuomo and the Legislature have a lot of work to do."

I'm ready to tackle the issues in Albany once again. I have the will to carry on the fight, the independence to make Western New York's voice heard, and the experience to make an impact.
