The Adventures of...

Rocket Man

by Doug Smith

'Lost In Cyberspace'

Rocket Man spent most of the last week of August indoor, trying to retrieve the 16,452 e-mails he accidentally deleted.

He periodically checks "junk" for legitimate items among the offers of "male enhancement" and schemes to help Nigel spirit millions out of Nigeria. Then he deletes all, a couple hundred or so.

But this time the screen started boasting of the number of e-mails it was deleting, the number climbing like the national debt, 8,000, then 10,000 and then finally, 16,452.

It had deleted every item in his every folder, from "addresses" to "The Valiant," 472 pages of phone numbers, family pictures, condolences on the loss of Rocket Cat Casey, even the first e-mail the First Mate ever got, from a gal named Gloria, now but a memory and a message.

Most deserved deletion -- the reviews, the put-downs from colleagues, the tedious arguments with editors.

But there were precious nuggets in this massive mine of mal-written memos -- grandson Clark's first piano recital, Brother Augustine's address, Polly's priceless recipe for lemon sponge pie, and every e-mail ever sent by a reader, pro or con.

Although the "deleted" folder held all 16,452 items, some internet assassin comes along at random and shoots them again, like Bin Laden, to make sure they're dead, deleting them from delete. Rocket Man must sort through all of them before it struck again. The clock was ticking. Again, he felt like the guy in the Newhart routine defusing the time bomb.

Rule one: Don't Read Them! Well, he weakened once or twice, amused at the futility and silliness of arguments past. Did he really tell a lady columnist, "there are gals on the street who don't work as hard for their money as I do?," and did she really reply, "don't make me laugh at things I shouldn't laugh at." Thanks for the memory.

While they were shuffled like blackjack decks, he quickly realized that if the sender was "Doug Smith," it was almost surely an old column or communication. Thirty-five at a time he dismissed them, the number slowly decreasing as his "delete" finger crept into carpal tunnel. The total regressed to four figures, the pages to 125.

Then suddenly they all were gone. While he went to re-heat up his coffee, the cyberspace hit man blew away the yet un-read. He hit "retrieve" and 11,000 came back. Feeling as if he'd gained five yards on second-and-35, he started plugging away again. At 2,000 the Demon Deleter struck again and this time he gave up, so if you've a gripe, re-send it.

Until further notice, "junk" will have to police itself.

Named "One of the Best Schools for Children with Autism" by TheBestSchools.org in 2012, Autism Services, Inc. is now expanding its education program to offer specialized educational and therapeutic services to additional children at its new Buffalo location.

The new school is located at 124 Elmwood Avenue in Buffalo. Opening this location will meet needs in a number of ways. "Having a presence in the city will allow for families to be better involved with their kids' education," explains Veronica Federiconi, Executive Director of Autism Services, Inc., "Rather than commute to Williamsville, parents will now be able to attend meetings and events closer to home."

In addition, the expansion allows for new inclusive opportunities for ASI students. With an already reciprocal relationship with the local arts community, students will now benefit from the rich cultural experiences Allentown and Elmwood communities have to offer. Autism Services is eager to use this expansion as an opportunity to provide autism awareness and acceptance outreach, and will soon be hosting an Open Forum for the community to learn about the autism population. Federiconi looks forward to integrating into the fabric of the local culture, and is certain the community will realize just how much our children have to offer.

September is Give The Blind a Chance To Read Month - Most people can read a newspaper, magazine or book - but thousands of our neighbors are blind or print-handicapped - they are unable to read the printed matter that most of us take for granted.

Since 1987, Radio Reading has given area print-handicapped persons daily access to printed material. Radio Reading's 300 volunteer radio readers broadcast readings 24 hours a day, every day, from its studios in Cheektowaga. It is regarded as New York State's finest radio reading service for the blind, and one of the nation's best. The NFRRS has broadcast more than 200,000 hours of readings to print-handicapped persons.

Volunteer Radio Readers are needed to share the joy of reading, including The Buffalo Rocket Newspaper. Contributions are needed as well. For more information on the Niagara Frontier Radio Reading Service, please call 821-5555

With a starting point at the magnificent Twentieth Century Club, the decades-old home tour that has become one of Allentown's signature events will be held this month. This unique event allows visitors the opportunity to tour the interior of private houses and other significant architectural properties in Buffalo's Allentown Historic District, showcasing some of Buffalo's best historic architecture. Visitors have a unique chance to view stunning interiors normally hidden from the public eye.

headquarters for the tour. Participants may buy tickets if they have not already done so and pick up their tour booklets. They can also sign up for a guided tour of the E.B. Green-designed TCC, which just received National Landmark status. This is a rare opportunity for Secrets tickets holders, as the Club is rarely opened for any kind of tour. Other properties on the tour are located on Park, Franklin, North Pearl, St. John's, and—a Secrets first—an excursion to a West Village residence in Johnson Park. Five of the properties on this year's tour have never been on before.

Once guests pick up their booklets at the twentieth Century Club and sign up for that tour, ticket holders are free to visit the properties in whichever order they choose. Included in the booklet are essays about the history and Allentown Association board president Ed Castine says that he thinks this year's tour will be a real revelation to visitors, adding "This is a wonderful group of properties. There is an E.B. You know who I am. And you know where I stand.

For 16 years, I served you on the Buffalo Common Council, and 12 years ago I fought for your interests in Albany as State Senator.

I'm a life-long democrat, a fairly unique distinction in this race. I don't report to a political boss, I report to over 300 thousand of them, and the only endorsement I seek is your vote in September.

Here is where I stand:

Taxes:

It's time to stop the flood of people and businesses leaving our state because of high taxes. Unfortunately, this problem doesn't have a silver bullet solution, but hundreds of the right, small decisions to realign the priorities of how we raise money, and how we spend it. And always remembering who you are fighting for.

Hydrofracking:

An unqualified NO! There are two sides to this issue – those who profit from it, and those that will have to pay its health and environmental costs.

Preservation:

Destroying communities and and riskng our children's health for the sake of expanding a duty-free shop is absolutely unconscionable.

Thruway Tolls:

This is nothing more than a cowardly back-door tax and another way for NY to scare away more business. The Thruway Authority should be forced to implement all recommendations made by the Comptroller in 2009 before we needlessly suffer under another toll increase.

Minimum Wage:

The New York State minimum wage has risen just 10¢ over the last five years making it nearly impossible for many families and students to keep up.

I favor raising New York's minimum wage from $7.25 to $8.50 per hour.
