An annual tradition, the children will be led by their coaches, the Buffalo Police and the Buffalo Fire Department, en-route to Shoshone.

Once at the park, everyone will gather around diamond one. Announcements will be made, the national anthem will be sung, then everyone will yell those familiar words...Play Ball!

The Adventures of...

Rocket Man

by Doug Smith

‘Arsenic & Old Lace’

Just for fun, imagine “Arsenic & Old Lace” as an episode of “Criminal Minds,” with the scrumptious Garcia rattling her keyboard and saying “Yes, baby cakes, Brewster, Brewster, I’ve got something here but you’re not gonna’ believe it, 12 missing persons in Brooklyn, and they all....”

Sisters Abby and Martha have guided a dozen would-be boarders to “a better place.” Nephew Jonathan has similarly reduced the surplus population, but with malice aforethought. Teddy, well, he’s OK, it’s just that he thinks he’s Theodore Roosevelt. But Mortimer, he’s really the sicko— a theater critic!

These happiest homicides in theatrical history are putting more smiles on the faces that lurk around the Niagara Regional Theatre Guild’s Ellicott Creek Playhouse. One show has sold out and for many others tickets are harder to come by than a quick fix for strychnine.

The stage is beautifully set and furnished for the late 30s (Rocket Man recognized pieces from his garage sale). Director Les Bailey has a great-looking cast, sumptuously garbed by costumier Nancy Watts. Every ring of the doorbell – this is a door-slamming farce with manners – comes on cue, triumph enough in the world of for-the-love-of-it theater.

Peg Merrill and Betsy Ross are a fine contrast as the innocently murderous aunts, oozing naivety. Bob Aquila brings to Teddy just a drop of whine, a hint of sadness in his madness, a nice touch. As minister’s daughter Elaine, Carolyn Mazierski is breathtakingly lusty, taking “love thy neighbor” to places the text may not endorse.

Joe Cassidy seems an appropriate catch as critic

Mortimer, Chris Turton has a nice sideways sneer as the malicious Jonathan and Tim Bookhagen has Peter Lorre sound down cold as plastic surgeon Einstein, who made the world safe for Botox.

Playwright Joseph Kesselring – whose bios refer vaguely to a mid-20s gig with “an amateur group in Niagara, NY (sic)” – offers a lot to careful listeners, satirical jibes at world politics, office feuds, the competence of critics and the density of police investigators.

“Criminal Minds” would get him for that. Wheels up in 30! The serial laughter continues through May 19, with a rare 3 p.m. matinee this Saturday.

On a sadder note – Rodgers & Hammerstein might have put it this way:

How do you close a school like Holy Angels?

How do you see such class and shut it down?

What will we ever do without our “Angels”?

How can we face our day without a frown?

Later, less poetry, more thoughts. Rocket Man ain’t Will Rogers, but he never met a Holy Angels grad he didn’t like.

Tulip is a beautiful adult tabby with the most wonderful round face. She was surrendered to the shelter by a person who could no longer care for her. This chubby little darling is a real love bug, who gets along well with people and other cats who respect her space. She is a quiet, friendly girl who seems to be adapting to her reduced circumstances, but would definitely prefer more spacious quarters - your home perhaps?
