The Adventures of...

Rocket Man

by Doug Smith

'A Little Night Music'

From coquettes to clowns, it's all smiles for "A Little Night Music" at Irish Classical Theater. The Stephen Sondheim tuner inspired by Ingmar Bergman's movie "Smiles of a Summer Night" dots its i's – infidelity, irony and insults – with precision.

And it has to. The squared circle of the Andrews playhouse affords no place to hide. Even the last row – the third – sits so close to the stage that actors are sometimes behind. Matt Witten, playing attorney Fredrik Egerman, the Scandinavian Cellino, carries his frown right out the door.

"Night Music's" couplings could confound the canniest of cartographers. Frederik, wed to giddy teen trophy Anne, chooses to visit old flame actress Desiree, she involved with a pompous, pistol-packin' soldier himself married to Countess Charlotte. Although Anne and Fredrik said their "I Do's" 11 months ago, they haven't "done it" yet. He is, as he says, "deflated." (Even in a downtown theater, there's no escaping Tom Brady.)

Also in the mix: Fredrik's seething seminarian son Henrik, Desiree's darling daughter Fredrika (11), Desiree's regal mother gathering them all for a show-down and Anne's robustly randy maidservant Petra. Director Chris Kelly plays the farce card gently, not a door-slam in 2 ½ hours, but Fredrik's episode in a purloined nightshirt about shakes the house to its foundations, or was that a passing streetcar?

"Night Music's" signature "Send in the Clowns" is sung bittersweetly and beautifully by Witten and Jenn Stafford, along with the sharply ironic, lesser known "You Must Meet My Wife." Renee Landrigan has a blast as the clueless Anne. Faith Walh plays the "little girl" with remarkable maturity while fully maintaining her childish charm. Also in a universally skilled and well-cast ensemble: Amy Jakiel as the maid on the make, Ben Caldwell as the seminarian ("Being young is ridiculous enough") and Pamela Rose Mangus overseeing it all to her own final curtain.

But it's soldier Anthony Alcocer, duelist at the drop of a kroner, who steals the show, or at least takes it prisoner. They call him a pea brain; sounds like crop failure from here. Michele Marie Roberts provides him a fine sounding board, a knowing but still offended wife, coldly referencing Desiree's "very remote youth." Mee-ow!

In the musical ensemble, Kirsten Fisher and Keith Galantowicz excel on violin and reeds.

"Night Music's" attitude toward even "retroactive infidelity" seems downright forgiving, but in the North Country, nights are long. So is the run, five shows at week through Oct. 18 at 625 Main. NINE ROCKETS (out of 10.)

TRAFFIC'S BACK - This was Rocket Man's first theater-district launch since autos returned to Main Street. He and the First Mate had a delightful pre-show conversation with a senior musician on a bench out front, he claiming to have walked all the way from Minnesota Street just to people watch. And afterward, a wedding reception seemed to have taken over the neighborhood, a fitting postscript to the connubial shenanigans on stage.

Doug Smith has reviewed theater on the Niagara Frontier since 1968. Fire back to pollyndoug@hotmail.com.

The American Cancer Society Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walk will be held Saturday, October 17th at Canalside, 44 Prime Street, Buffalo, and will unite the WNY community with a shared determination to finish the fight against breast cancer. Registration for this noncompetitive, inspirational event begins at 8:30 am and the walk is set to start at 10:00 am.

Dollars raised enable the Society to fund groundbreaking breast cancer research; provide free, comprehensive information and support to those touched by the disease; and help people take steps to reduce their breast cancer risk or find it early when it's most treatable.

Since 1993, more than 11 million supporters have raised more than $685 million nationwide. Last year, nearly 10,000 walkers in Buffalo helped to raise more than $500,000.

"Coming together at the Making Strides walk gives us power to make a real difference in the fight to end breast cancer," said Allison Jasper, community manager for the Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walk. "At the event, we celebrate survivorship and pay a meaningful tribute to those touched by the disease. Thanks to the thousands of participants, team leaders, sponsors and survivors, the American Cancer Society is there for those who are currently dealing with a breast cancer diagnosis, those who may face a diagnosis in the future, and those who may avoid a diagnosis altogether because of education and risk reduction."

To learn more about the Making Strides Against Breast Cancer event and how you can become involved, visit MakingStridesWalk.org/Buffalo or contact Allison Jasper at 689-6982 or BuffaloNYS-trides@cancer.org.

Nearly 10,000 people participated in the Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walk last year in Buffalo, raising more than $500,000 for research, education, treatment, and prevention of breast cancer.

ROCKY

Hi! My name is Rocky, and I'm an eligible bachelor just looking for love. Aren't I handsome? My foster mom says there's a lot more to me than just my good looks but let's be honest, I'm a LOOKER! I was at the shelter for about 5 months before I moved into a foster home and boy do I like this foster home better than I liked the shelter. I have canine foster brothers and sisters that I get to run around and wrestle with, I sleep in a warm and very cozy crate and my foster mom and dad give me plenty of hugs and kisses. Everyone keeps telling me how smart I am, but is it really hard to sit, go to my crate or lay down on command? That's child's play for me! I love to play, run around or settle down with a nylabone. I also love binge watching shows on Netflix with my foster mom. Do you have Netflix and a backyard to play in? If so, I love you already! Foster mom said to make sure I tell everyone that I'm housebroken, crate trained, quiet and an easy going but playful fella. If you think I could be a good fit for you, please email my foster mom at Melanie.ruskin@gmail.com.
