

Putting STEM Skills to Test

Fifth-graders at West Hertel Academy built LEGO cranes during Advanced Manufacturing Day as part of the Buffalo Schools’ STEM Experience.

Nearly 90 fifth graders from Buffalo Public Schools’ West Hertel Academy tested their science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) skills by 3-D printing model wind turbines, building light-powered LEGO cranes and learning how GPS is used to locate shared bikes. BPS Advanced Manufacturing Day (#STEM_Buffalo) is part of the Buffalo Public Schools STEM Experience, a private/public alliance that uses hands-on workshops, field trips and speakers to interest city students in STEM skills. As part of the day’s events, the students were

The Adventures of...

Rocket Man

by Doug Smith

Premature Ejection

If timing is everything, Rocket Man's nothing. A 67-year veteran of the journalism wars oughta' know better than to get scooped on his own retirement.

But it happened. In an article that left Rocket Man gasping, the Buffalo News' Colin Dabkowski outted his flight plan last Sunday. ArtVoice's Javier Bustillos picked up anyone Colin didn't reach. Rocket Man and First Mate are stowing their gear and lifting off for the remote colony of Cortland, NY, gravitating toward a daughter and family, notably a grandson who's a full-fledged member of this crew.

Dabkowski's article, more lengthy than reports that day on the departures of Peyton Manning and Nancy Reagan, was too pleasant by half. The last person Rocket Man so glowingly hailed was the late Irish Classical actor Chris O'Neill. Quoting his idol Jack Benny, Rocket Man would say, "I don't deserve this – but I have arthritis, and I don't deserve that, either."

Colin visited Rocket Man's quarters for an hour, and got to say less than a guest of Bill O'Reilly. That he could condense this into any less than "War & Peace" qualifies as a miracle of mental editing. Further, he captured the role of the First Mate with astronomical precision, and for anyone who did happen to miss the point, there was photographer and life coach Sharon Cantillon (rhymes with "villain"), who actually coaxed the uptight Rocket Man into a civil countenance.

Of the First Mate she declared, "You're a natural."

One element seems to demand a little clarification. Colin was justly skeptical of Rocket Man's "claim" to have written 57 stories one night for a newspaper in Pennsylvania. In print, it looked funny even to Rocket Man. Well, the number is actually 53. In the flurry of one-sided conversation, thinking of his next anniversary, Rocket Man may have fruedianly flubbed the figure.

Rocket Man's illustrious 67-year career included piloting an elephant.

As sports editor of the brand-new Warren Observer in 1962, Rocket Man gathered, wrote, produced and laid out the entire sports section. The paper did not publish Sundays and holidays and so, probably on Memorial Day or The Fourth, had three days' events to catch up on. Usually the sports section ran to four tabloid (ArtVoice-sized) pages but Rocket Man remembers distinctly asking the publisher for two more to handle the long-weekend load.

So the 53 stories, many only two or three sentences long, piled up over the weekend for assemblage Monday night and it wasn't until he re-read the section, probably over lunch on Tuesday, that he calculated the enormity of the task. He vividly remembers the count as a prime number (which "57" is not). So it is possible that he did not exactly "write 57 stories in one night," but he did have 53 stories in one day's sports section, and 53 headlines, as well.

But all of them put together did not hold a control-panel light to Colin's Sunday essay. Rocket Man says thanking a reporter is like tipping a cardiologist, but he, we, will be eternally grateful. The rest of you don't get rid of us this easily. We've got a few left. For the record, this column took 32 minutes.

t-ball to a ten year old, minors division. It has been the League's most exciting level of play with huge numbers of boys and girls signed up. Each boy and girl has a chance to hit the baseball or softball in any inning on any given day. Hertel North Park is once again urging boys and girls to register for the coming season as soon as possible. Many have already done so but the earlier the better to assure of a child's playing on the same team. Another registration is scheduled for Monday March 21st at the North Buffalo Community Center. Nearly every Major League team is represented in Shoshone Park each season. There's close to seventy teams playing nightly and on Saturday from May until August.

Hertel North Park is now 60 years old, one of the longest, continuously run youth organizations in Western New York since 1957. Many families have had several generations of children and grandchildren come back into North Buffalo to play in that patch of green off of Hertel near Main Street. This year's Opening Day is slated for Saturday, May 7th. Time to Play Ball!

This Week's Featured Friend:

CUDDLES

Cuddles is a handsome young guy and a ton of fun. He has a great personality and a really great low, raspy meow. Cuddles is adorable with his orange and white coat and, at 2 years old, he still has plenty of pep in his step. He loves to play, play, play! Laser pointers, feathers, or toy mice can keep him going for a long time. Initially, Cuddles is not quite as snuggly as his name implies, but he does enjoy petting once his energy flags a bit. This active boy is tired of living in a condo and wants a house to roam and play! Cuddles gets along well with other felines and might enjoy another playful cat companion. He savors his wet food and will make a beeline to you when he hears the canned food lid pop. If you think he sounds like a good fit for your family, visit him at the Cat Adoption Center at Petsmart on Elmwood Avenue between Hertel and Kenmore. Pet ID: 30451680
