Stephanie Berghash and her crew of volunteers replacing trees that were lost in the University Heights neighborhood. The news trees will help increase property value along with improving air quality.

The intrepid group of hardy volunteer tree planters will be picking up their shovels this Saturday for the fall tree planting coordinated by Re-Tree.

It has been twelve years since the devastating October 12, 2006 storm removed thousands of trees from the Western New York landscape.

A dozen City of Buffalo organizations will be pitching in to replace those trees, adding 106 more to streets and parks in the city's neighborhoods.

"We are inching ever-closer to the goal of 30,000 trees planted by our volunteers," stated Paul D. Maurer, founder and chairman of Re-Tree, a program of the Buffalo Green Fund. Each tree planted by volunteers has been matched by municipalities so that the nearly 60,000 trees lost in the storm's wake are replaced when the goal is reached.

This Saturday's reforestation is being done on Ketchum, York, and Jersey Streets in the area near Kleinhans Music Hall. In the Allentown section of the city, new foliage will be planted on College, North, Days Park, Hudson, Arlington Park, Symphony Circle, Virginia, Edward, and Pennsylvania Street. The largest planting will be in the University District, with 25 trees going into Godfrey, Martha, Roosevelt, and other streets with the "Re-Tree the District – The University Heights Collabora-

Daylight Saving Time

Most people in the United States can enjoy an extra hour of sleep this weekend, thanks to the annual shift back to standard time. The change officially occurs at 2 am local time on Sunday, November 4th. Most people set their clocks back before heading to bed Saturday night. The shift moves one hour of daylight to the morning from the evening. Public safety officials say this is also a good time to put a new battery in the smoke alarm, no matter where you live. So good news, you'll get an extra hour of sleep on Sunday.

Flames Burn Sabres 2-1 In Overtime

The Sabres were outplayed by the Calgary Flames Tuesday night at the Keybank Center but led 1-0 into the last minute before the Flames rallied for a last minute tie and then winning in overtime. The loss was in spite of a strong effort by goalie Carter Hutton with 36 saves. Jack Eichel ended an eight game goal drought scoring Buffalo's only goal on a rising shot from the off wing.

The Flames had appeared to even the score at the start of the second period. After a sensational stick save by Hutton that prevented a Calgary shot from crossing the goal line, the puck went into the net on a second opportunity but the referee had already blown the whistle and the goal was disallowed. A replay review upheld the decision.

Late in the game the Sabres failed to clear their zone four times on the left wing as Calgary sealed off the wall keeping the puck in the Sabres defensive zone. The last failed attempt proved fatal with Flames goalie Dave Rittich on the bench for an extra attacker, the puck was worked to the opposite side where Matthew Tkachuk scored to tie the game deflecting a shot by Elias Lundholm that also deflected off Rasmus Ristolainen's stick and the ice before slipping past Buffalo goalie Carter Hutton.

The Sabres had opened overtime on a two minute power play courtesy of a tripping penalty by Tkachuk as time expired in the third period. But the Sabres failed to generate any scoring opportunities and Calgary seized the remainder of the OT with Johnny Gaudreau scoring at 2:40 on a two on one off a neat give and go with Mark Giordano as Jack Eichel was back defending because defenseman Rasmus Ristolainen had been caught up ice. Gaudreau took a long pass at the Sabres line and then fed Giordano on the left wing. Hutton committed to Giordano who then slipped the puck across to Gaudreau for the winner.

Hutton lost the win and his shutout after playing a strong game which was not adequately supported by his teammates. He was rather upset after the game and snapped at a couple of reporters in the locker room for criticizing his play. "I just feel bad for him," Sabres coach Phil Housley said. "He's really given us some really good, solid goaltending and he's been asked to stand on his head and that's unfortunate. He was our best player once again. He gave us a chance to win."

"We didn't play well," Eichel said. "Obviously, they outplayed us and we didn't deserve to win that game." Jason Pominville assisted on Eichel's goal for his 500th point with the Sabres, tying him with Danny Gare for ninth in Buffalo history. It also extended his point streak to five games with four goals and five assists. The Sabres have earned at least a point in five straight games (3-0-2) for the first time since a nine game point streak in 2012, but have lost their last two including last Saturdays 5-4 OT loss in Columbus.

The Sabres open a series against the Ottawa Senators on Thursday night in Ottawa followed by a 2 pm matinee in Buffalo on Saturday.

The Long Island Express, A Drive To Remember

In previous columns I have mentioned that my one daughter is a professional model in New York city and has been for many years. So, we have had dozens of visits to the big apple going back into the 70's. The one time that was the most memorable was a trip to the Hamptons.

After driving the seven hours from Buffalo to Manhattan, we arrived there late in the day. We knew where we were going to stay but did not realize how bad the parking situation was in that area. There was almost none. After dropping off the clan and luggage at the door, I went hunting for a place to leave our vehicle overnight. Found a parking ramp a couple of blocks away for $20 a day. That was cheap back then. Being El Supremo cheapo I had a problem with that, but it was what it was. This was New York. It was just for one night, as the next day we were headed to the Hamptons. The Hamptons, where the elite in New York go for the weekends. The very well to do, do. It was exciting just to think we were going there. My daughter had rented a cottage right on the beach. We were going to rub elbows with people who did not care how much a meal cost on the menu. Just buy what you want, never look at the price. Wish I could do that. My daughter always said if you must look at the price, you usually can't afford being there.

That first night we stayed at the apartment of another model. She was leaving, and we were welcome to spend the night as her guest. We got to meet her and am I glad we did. She was stunning. Was the model on the covers of many paperback books. On a scale of 1 to 10 she was a 12. Not only was she beautiful but charming as well. Really nice, down to earth person and fun to be with. She stayed for a brief visit but had to leave. Thanked her for the accommodations and we settled in. Had to drive to the Hamptons the next day on the L.I.E. The L.I.E is short for the Long Island Express. Death row. If you have been there you know of what I speak. Had no idea what was in store.

After doing a little sightseeing and lingering in Manhattan, it was time to go. Friday night on the L.I.E. I thought I was going to die. Imagine the worst traffic situation you have been in and double it. That is the Long Island Express. There was no slow lane and there was no passing lane. They were all passing lanes as fast as you can go, left, right, middle, shoulder, as long as you can keep moving as fast as you can go. Now I am used to good old Buffalo and normal driving and mostly courteous drivers. Not here, in and out cutting you off and everyone blows their horns. Some just do it out of habit. My daughter was used to this and told me to be more like Richard Petty, the race car driver. Go faster and weave in and out. Are you kidding me? I was scared to death! I am a fast driver and going 75 in a 65 MPH speed zone, yet it was like I was standing still. I think the obsession with the other drivers was to not allow anyone to go faster and pass you. That would be an insult to a New Yorker. We had to go from one end of Long Island to the other. Now I know why it is called LONG Island. Thought we would never reach the other end.

After an hour of stress, we are there. The Hamptons, where the rich and famous hang out. It was well worth having to spend $20 to park as it cost me nothing the rest of the way. Great place right on the beach. Not being familiar with this part of the ocean, upon entering the water, immediately got stung by a Jellyfish. That was not fun. What was nice was being able to dig for clams, one of my favorites. The beach was loaded with both clams and crabs. Seafood delight. A most enjoyable weekend. The dread of driving back on the L.I.E. took away from the otherwise relaxing atmosphere. I anticipated it with fear.

The thought of the drive back lingered with me. So much so that I decided to take an alternate route and leave at five in the morning to try to beat the traffic. Which we did. Totally different ride, it was busy but normal busy. Once off the island and on the way home, we all had a sigh of relief. We were about to leave the hustle and bustle that is New York city. Great place to visit, but I would not want to live there. If I ever go to the Hamptons again it will be by plane. However, it is not on my bucket list. Guess it is something you get accustomed to. I'll take the 290 and the 190 any day.

Do you have a birthday greeting you would like to see here? Birthdays, anniversaries, interesting pictures, short stories or even a 500 word column of interest to your neighbors. Send them to me and I will see what I can do. Nothing political or controversial. Send to Jbortze@aol.com

Seniors In The Workplace

The oldest segments of the population are also the fastest growing segments of the American labor force, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The BLS reports that younger members of the workforce have a stable, lower level of participation but the numbers of older workers – those 65 to 75 and older – are expected to increase steadily through 2024

“It’s a good thing,” says Dan Weber, president of the Association of Mature American Citizens. “The reason: an older workforce is a more engaged workforce. Gallup says that older workers are more ‘involved in and enthusiastic about their work and are more productive in their workplaces – than younger workers. People are not only living longer these days, they’re living healthier, more active lives. That, combined with the greater freedom at home that comes with reduced family obligations, makes older employees more focused on the satisfaction of a job well done.”

Weber also points out that employers gain a competitive advantage by utilizing the experience and know-how of older workers and taking advantage of the knowledge they’ve gained over the years.

The Society for Human Resource Management conducted research and “found that the top three advantages of older workers, compared with other workers, are more work experience (77%), higher level of maturity/professionalism (71%) and stronger work ethic (70%).”

In addition, working seniors have a positive effect on the economy. They have more disposable income and, as a result, have created a growth market for private sector companies catering to their needs.

Ageism is still a problem for older workers, according to Weber, but there are signs that employers are waking up to the reality that there are a lot of benefits to keeping senior employees on their payrolls and hiring from the fast-growing pool of older job seekers. “They are beginning to realize that seniors can adapt to new ways and that they can be excellent role models for younger workers, that their enthusiasm is infectious, that in most cases the work means more to them than their paychecks and, of course, that they have had a lifetime of learning from their mistakes.”
