Sabres Hit Rock Bottom Again With 7-3 Loss

Coming home to play the Sabres always seems to bring out the best from Patrick Kane. In the debacle that unfolded at the Keybank Center February 1st. The Sabres lost 7-3 to the Chicago Blackhawks as Kane hit the twine for two goals and added a pair of assists. The four point night gave Kane 25 points (-16-25) in his last ten games.

While the Sabres were even with the Hawks in territorial play and out-shot them 43-29 the game was one sided with Sabres players repeatedly turning the puck over to their opponents for scoring chances. Carter Hutton was beaten four times on 22 shots through the second period before being pulled. Linus Ullmark blocked five of the seven shots he faced in relief.

This was the Sabres second consecutive loss. They are 4-9-1 in their past 14 games. It was the sixth time in their past eight games they have given up at least four goals. The Sabres struggling power play scored for only the second time in their last 11 games despite 28 chances.

"In the first period, we had 15 shots, we should've had 25 shots," Buffalo coach Phil Housley said. "We passed up way too many opportunities, and when we did get shots nobody was in front of the net. "The learning experiences are far over now. We're 50 some odd mistakes are costing us points, and that's points in the standings that we can't lose," said Jack Eichel.

Sam Rhinehart had a goal and an assist for the Buffalo Sabres before scoring the only goal in the shootout for a 5-4 win against the Minnesota Wild at KeyBank Center on Tuesday February 6th.

Jack Eichel was a dominant force and had had two assists while Evan Rodrigues, C. J. Smith and Rasmus Dahlin scored goals for Buffalo.

Linus Ullmark made 41 saves.

"We have a 3-1 lead, and that's a time to really lock it down and keep a simple game," Sabres coach Phil Housley said. "I thought we were trying to get four, but not in the right way. In the defensive zone, guys were beating us back to the net." The Wild scored twice to tie the game before Reinhart made it 4-3 at 6:25 of the third period. Zach Parise tied the game at 4-4 to send it to overtime. Rhinehart said that it was very important to keep an even keel whether winning or losing, "I think that's been a big focus for us this year. I think earlier in the year we did a really good job with it. Obviously, it's always easy when you're winning games, but when you're going through a stretch like we have, it's really important to stay composed, and that's what we're doing right now. But it was a big one for us tonight. We have another day to work and prepare for Thursday against the Carolina Hurricanes."

Patrick Kane notched four points against Sabres.

Grandmothers

With the growth of social media, it is common to see messages from grandmothers to their grandkids. A great form of communication between the generations that didn't exist not that many years ago. If for nothing else social media is good. Now that we find families spread all over the country and even the world, it is nice to be able to share everyday occurrences and be able to actually "keep in touch".

I do get a kick out of seeing the postings between the two, grandmothers and grand kids, as in most cases the age separation in years, is quite a bit. In almost all cases there is a great bit of love. Why not? Grandparents do not have to be disciplinarians. That chore is up to the parents, so that eliminates any harsh feelings resulting in punishment for behavior problems. Grandparents just sit back, spoil away and not worry about any consequences. It is a unique obligation, wait for the visit from the family and fuss over the grand kids.

I was not blessed with a grandmother as both had passed before I was born. Sometimes when I read the postings and the love expressed, I see how much I missed. I did look up their grave sites and visited both. Felt like I need to make some sort of connection. Hard to miss something you never had but, reading the posts, it makes you think and wonder what it would have been like. No grandfather on my fathers' side as my dad was an orphan who was raised by, you guessed it his grandmother. She had also passed before I entered the world so all I heard were stories about how wonderful she was. I did have a grandfather on my mother's side who immigrated from Italy. He refused to learn English and only spoke Italian. Any conversations with him were usually one-word sentences. Hello, Goodbye.

My kids were fortunate enough to have had grandparents. At least for a while as my parents left us in their mid-sixties. My wife's parents lived out of town. My mother, who was Italian, followed the Italian tradition. We all went to her house on Sunday. Sunday was visit grandmother day. She would cook for all of us and loved it. We all lived close enough to do that. During the week, she made her own bread, pizza and cinnamon rolls, that was the extras. The main course was spaghetti and meatballs. Sunday dinner at grandma's house was as traditional as Christmas. Usually counting adults and children, there was 27 of us all together. No problem for grandma. In those days everyone did their part as far as bringing something or clearing afterwards. No mistaking it, she was the boss. Like most grandmothers she was a lovable person, as a mother and grandmother.

Now that we are grandparents, I watch my wife in action. Absolutely loves when the grand kids come over. Always a dish of candy and cookies are at hand, just in case. Remembers every birthday and sends a card and gift. Same for Holidays and Christmas. They all must be remembered. Give me a break. One is almost 40. She is a grand kid but no kid even though she sometimes still acts like one. They look for her hand made cards and notes filled with the love only a grandmother can give. They know they are coming, and she never misses.

If your grandmother is still with you, give her a call and see how much she appreciates the thought. If it were not for her, you would not be here. Many of the things you have are a result in some way of the compassion she has shown for your parents and you. Remember to give her a big hug and kiss next time you see her. A simple "I love you grandma" goes a long way. Wish I could have done that.

Do you have a birthday greeting you would like to see here? Birthdays, anniversaries, interesting pictures, short stories or even a 500 word column of interest to your neighbors. Send them to me and I will see what I can do. Nothing political or controversial. Send to Jbortze@aol.com

Ask Rusty - Social Security for Couple With Large Age Difference

Dear Rusty: My wife is 63 and I'm 55. I've been the breadwinner for 37 years and draw almost $2000 per month tax free from VA disability for life. I'm also still working until I'm 60 or 62, not sure yet, and will have a pension of about $1900 per month. We have about $300k put away in retirement accounts. Since I still have a few years I haven't really looked much into retirement. Is there anything you can recommend on how to go about social security with the age difference? Signed: Younger Husband

Dear Younger: With your VA disability benefit, your expected pension from work, your savings and your eventual Social Security benefit you are positioned better than many for your later retirement. You didn't say whether your wife is already collecting Social Security benefits on her own work record, and that can be a factor in deciding when you should apply. This is because (from what you've told me) your wife will eventually be entitled to spousal benefits from your record. To start, please note that your wife's full retirement age (FRA) for Social Security purposes is 66 years and 2 months, while your full retirement age is 67. Your full retirement age is when you get 100% of what you have earned from a lifetime of working, but if you claim benefits earlier than your FRA, they will be reduced and if you wait beyond your FRA you can earn more. When to claim your Social Security should always take several things into account – your health, your current (and future) financial needs and your expected longevity. You cannot claim your Social Security until you are at least 62 years of age, but if you claim at 62 you will incur a 30% cut in the benefit you would be entitled to at age 67, and that is a permanent reduction. Assuming your wife will be eligible for a spousal benefit from your record, since she will have reached her FRA whenever you claim benefits she can get up to 50% of the benefit amount you are due at your full retirement age. But if she claimed her own SS retirement benefit before her FRA, her spousal benefit will be somewhat reduced. Your wife cannot get her spousal benefit until you start collecting your Social Security so that may be a factor influencing the decision of when you should apply. While that might suggest you should apply as soon as you're eligible, you should also remember you will take a cut in benefits by claiming earlier than your FRA. You can maximize your benefit by waiting beyond your FRA to apply and earning delayed retirement credits which would yield a benefit 8% higher for each year you delay, up to age 70 when you could get 24% more than you'll get at age 67. However, delaying would mean your wife can't collect her spousal benefit until you start your benefits, so you should weigh the loss of her spousal benefit against the increase you get by delaying (remembering that you would get the higher benefit for the rest of your life, which is where expected longevity comes into play). And one other point: if you claim before your FRA and continue to work, you will be subject to Social Security's annual earnings limit until you reach your FRA (exceeding the annual limit will cause Social Security to withhold some of your benefits). So, as you can see, there are numerous considerations when it comes to deciding when you should claim your Social Security. I suggest you get a Statement of Estimated Benefits from Social Security. You can do that by contacting your local office (find it at www.ssa.gov/locator) or by creating your personal "My Social Security" online account at www.ssa.gov. Your

Statement of Estimated Benefits will show your estimated benefit at ages 62, 67 and 70, and you can evaluate which of those amounts is most beneficial, considering your financial needs, your wife's potential spousal benefit, and your anticipated longevity.
