USPS/NALC Stamp Out Hunger Food Drive

With the help of sponsors, volunteer organizations and U.S. Postal Service employees in 10,000 communities nationwide, the National Association of Letter Carriers (NALC) will conduct its 27th annual Stamp Out Hunger Food Drive on Saturday, May 11. Stamp Out Hunger is the nation's largest single-day food drive.

Last year's drive resulted in carriers collecting 71.6 million pounds of food from local communities in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam and the U.S. Virgin Islands. Since the drive began in 1993, total donations have surpassed 1.6 billion pounds of food. The food drive has become the nation's largest one-day campaign to collect food for distribution to needy families.

Western NY communities donated nearly 1 million pounds of food for their neighbors in the 2018 NALC Stamp Out Hunger Food Drive. All food collected is brought to local food pantries, food banks, and soup kitchens. In other words, it stays local.

Making a donation is easy. Customers should leave their non-perishable food donations in a bag near their mailbox on Saturday, May 11, before their letter carrier arrives. In the days leading up to the food drive, letter carriers

DEUCE

See the video on our Facebook page!

Deuce is a handsome orange tabby boy. This friendly, playful cat is less than a year old and was recently surrendered to the shelter. He is very active and loves to play. Therefore he is asking for larger quarters as his cage at the shelter does not provide the running room he feels is his due. Stop by at the Shelter at 380 N Oak Street and see if he is the boy for you.

Housley and Botterill Share Responsibility

Following their 10 game winning streak, Housley and the Sabres players failed to turn around a season that fell apart with a league worst 16-33-8 record. If the Sabres hadn't slumped after the win streak, coach Phil Housley might have been back in 1919-20 with some additional assets to help like Rochester Americans leading scorer Victor Olofsson and Alex Nylander who both showed their scoring talents translated to NHL success in late season call ups to the Sabres. General Manager Jason Botterill admitted that he didn't give Housley enough tools to be successful. Nylander and Olofsson could have helped earlier in the season but they weren't ready to be promoted. The organizational philosophy under Botterill is not to rush their prospects into the NHL but let them learn to play the game the right way in Rochester. And he kept them there until they were ready for promotion.

The weakest part of Housley's tenure was the failure to have his players demonstrate an effective defensive system. It was difficult to see what the system was as players were frequently chasing opponents around the defensive zone rather than playing a zone style defense that protects the prime scoring area in front of the net. Eighty percent of goals in the NHL are scored from within ten feet of the net. Opposing teams knew that they could created chaos by having the puck carrier circling the zone and the Sabres frequently were victimized by goals scored from 8-10 feet by unmarked opponents. The players never changed their ways after Housley called the out for playing soft.

Housley's constant line juggling failed to yield results. The lack of talent and depth on defense forced the overuse of Rasmus Ristolainen at 25 minutes per game, Risto's frequent turnovers fueled his league worst minus 48 and run counter to the puck possession style of today's game. Players like Tage Thompson and Vladimir Sobotka look like they don't even belong in the league yet to gobbled up lots of ice time and contributed little.

Botterill's successes included trading for Jeff Skinner who scored a career high 40 goals, drafting Rasmus Dahlin (A no brainer) and rebuilding the Sabres' farm system where prospects can learn the pro game and develop a winning culture in Rochester.

But the Ryan O'Reilly trade was a disaster. It's a popular story line that O'Reilly had to go because of his constant admissions that he needs to play better and his post season comment that he lost his love for hockey. However the Sabres mis-handled O'Reilly who was brought here and made the highest paid player in franchise history to be the number one center and take pressure off rookie Jack Eichel. Then the team made Eichel the captain, a role that at age 21 he is just not ready for. The team should have made O'Reilly the captain and let Eichel learn that role from the veteran. O'Reilly has craved more responsibility since his day in Colorado and he was effectively demoted by Buffalo. He has proven his worth since the trade.

All season long the team lacked a second scoring line while O'Reilly put up a career high 77 points with the St. Louis Blues who are now heading to the Western Conference finals.

There is virtually no return from the trade. Patrick Berglund left the team. Vladimir Sobotka scored five goals. Tage Thompson had seven and finished the season in the minors where he belongs. The 2019 first round pick acquired helped the Sabres to acquire Brandon Montour.

Ryan O'Reilly stars for St Louis.

Middle Child

What does it feel like to be the middle child of a family with eight children? I can relate as I was one. Also, have a son that was born fifth of eight. We both have three older brothers and one sister with two younger sisters and a younger brother. Even though we grew up in different generations, the situation is similar. The older siblings seem to get more attention as they are first, and the family is in better financial shape. As the family grows the attention and the finances must be distributed more so less for each. When the last three come into the picture the older siblings are available to help. Spend needed attention time with them, and even contributing with monetary income like paper routes.

Cannot complain about my childhood as a middle child, as I was pretty much left to fend for myself and had my freedom. Things were just different back then. We had limited income, so I did without, which was fine. My son who was in the same situation had a different personality. As a youngster we would sit him on the top step of our front porch, and he was content to just watch the cars go by. For hours. The point is we learned to appreciate the little things in life. Which leads to this little story.

One of the perks of owning a weekly newspaper is the free passes we were allowed in exchange for advertising. Disney on Ice, Movie theatres, Hotels, Plays, Stage shows, even Disney World in Florida. One of these many passes were to the Ringling Brothers Barnum and Bailey Circus. Enough passes for not only our family but enough to share them with our advertisers' families and our readers. One night, we are all set to go and see the greatest show on earth. A problem arose. Our middle son was sick with the flu and could not possibly attend. Rather than disappoint the rest of the family, we got a babysitter and left him home with the promise to somehow make it up to him. He was so disappointed as he is an animal lover and was so looking forward to seeing the lions and tigers and bears, oh my.

After he recovered from his illness, we had to come up with some way to fulfill the promise we made to him. Remember he was in the middle and was relegated to just go with the family flow and not normally the center of attention. His simple request was to go for a hot dog at Teds. At that time Teds was located under the peace bridge at the end of Massachusetts Avenue. Going to Ted's was always a special occasion for the family. To go as the only one was momentous. A ten-block walk from where we lived on 15th street. That did not matter to him, he would be happy with that. We bought him a small pair of binoculars as a token gift. Off we went walking the ten blocks with just my wife, myself and him. We left the rest of the family home as this was his special occasion. He was for the first time the main man. On this night he rose to the top. Just him alone and us and he loved it. He walked so proudly those ten blocks with his chest out like he was King Tut. Every so often he looked through his new binoculars hung around his neck like a recently received trophy. He probably still has them.

At Ted's we let him order on his own and anything he wanted. Hot dog and fries were his preferences followed by an ice cream cone. As we watched him enjoy his meal with a smile of contentment, we were so happy we did this. It was a great night and one we will always remember.

Funny how in the memory of that time, we did not realize how important it was for a middle child to get this special attention. Not only that but in thinking in my mind what to write this week and this story, I realized for the first time I was a middle child along with this son.

Probably not too many families with eight children anymore, but if there are and even if it is just three, remember the middle sibling. Sometimes the forgotten one. Lost in the shuffle so to speak. Is that the reason we seem to make more noise and crave attention?

Ask Rusty - Will My Benefit Amount Ever Increase?

Dear Rusty: I'm still working right now, but everyone I talk to about Social Security seems to say that I should wait to take my benefit because once I start the amount will never go up. Problem is I really need the money now. Is it really true that once I claim the amount of my Social Security will never go up? Signed: Curious

Dear Curious: Well, there is a lot to be said for waiting as long as you can to take your benefits, not the least of which is that the longer you wait the larger your benefit amount will be. If you apply when you turn 62, you'll only be getting about 74% of what you would get if you waited until your full retirement age (which for most people applying today is between 66 and 67). And for the most part, that is the benefit you will receive for the rest of your life, except in the following circumstances:

Cost of Living Adjustments (COLAs) are calculated annually by Social Security according to a formula using the Consumer Price Index to determine the rate of inflation. If the result of that calculation calls for it, your benefit amount will increase by a small percentage to keep pace with the cost of living. While the COLA increases your benefit in most years, no cost of living adjustment occurred in 2009, 2010 and 2015 and the 2016 increase was a mere 0.3%. So your benefit amount will usually, but not always, increase as necessary for inflation.

If you work while you're collecting Social Security and you earn a significant salary, there is a chance your benefit amount could increase. That's because of the way that Social Security determines your benefit amount in the first place, which is by taking your 35 highest-earning years to arrive at your Average Indexed Monthly Earnings, from which your benefit amount is calculated. If you have, within that 35 year window, years in which you had zero earnings, or very low earnings, your current earnings could replace one or more of those years causing your benefit to increase slightly.

If you collect benefits and work before reaching your full retirement age and you exceed Social Security's annual earnings limit, they will withhold some of your future benefits. But that doesn't mean that you'll lose those withheld benefits forever because, when you reach your full retirement age, they'll recalculate your benefit amount to give you time credit for any months they withheld benefits because you earned more than the annual limit. That means that your benefit amount will go up a little when they do that recalculation.

If you are collecting benefits on your own work record, and you have a spouse who is not yet collecting Social Security, it's possible you may get a "spousal boost" when your spouse finally files for benefits. This would occur if the benefit you are entitled to as a spouse is higher than your benefit on your own record, which might be the case if your spouse is the higher-earning partner. The easy way to look at this is: if one-half of your spouse's benefit at full retirement age is more than your current benefit from your own work record, you should contact your local Social Security office to ensure you get the maximum benefit you're entitled to.

So, as you can see, the benefit amount you first get when you apply for Social Security isn't fixed because you will usually get an annual COLA adjustment for inflation, and it may also increase if any of the fairly common circumstances described above apply to you. There are a couple of other less common circumstances which could apply for those grandfathered from changes made by the Bipartisan Budget Act of 2015, but those are outside the scope of this article. But, with the possible exception of a spousal boost, don't expect any increase you might get to be very large.

Sunshine filled the sky this past Saturday over North Buffalo and gave the Hertel North Park Youth Baseball League plenty of time to celebrate. It's another season of North Buffalo Baseball in Shoshone Park and the nearly 600 boys and girls on hand, couldn't wait to get to the diamonds to Play Ball.

Near the corner of Hertel and Saranac Avenue, dressed in new uniform shirts and baseball caps, children between the ages of four to 14, met with their coaches and under a Buffalo Police and Fire escort, marched up Hertel to the home of the League since 1957. From St. Margaret's Church, the children were greeted by hundreds of neighborhood residents and business owners who had stepped out of their establishments to say "hello" and welcome another season of possibly the best baseball and softball League in the City of Buffalo, if not in New York State.

Leading the Parade again as usual was Buffalo Mayor Byron W. Brown, who proclaimed it to be at a microphone at home plate at the tiny Park located near the corner of Main Street. The four term top Leader of Buffalo government has been a friend to the League since day one of his administration and has helped League president Don Morris in his efforts to bring a new building to the perimeter of the green space where eight tiny diamonds are cut out for children to play on five nights a week and all day Saturday until late August.

"I would like to thank Don Morris and his group of volunteers who help him run this league, all the coaches who volunteer their time to these kids and of course all you parents who make sure your children have a safe place to play. I'd also like to thank our Parks Department in the City for helping get the fields ready. Have a wonderful day everyone and enjoy your season."

Delaware District Council member Joel Feroletto was also on hand and divulged his history of playing in this League over 20 years ago as a child growing up just a few streets away. He announced the additional funding of $150,000 has been secured from the City towards the 1,000,000 set aside late last season by State Senator Chris Jacobs.

New City Court Judge Peter Savage was also on hand and besides informing the crowd that he was a sponsor for a team, he expressed his love for the League by coaching two teams in the Park while working downtown. "I love it," he said, "I can't think of a better place to be bringing my kids to in the Summertime than Shoshone Park."

But this day was for the children who have signed up to play this season. Four students from City Honors High School sang the National Anthem. They were Bianca Billoni, Jordan Eason, Sinead McDevitt and Trinity Ridout lending their voices toward the American flag near the leagues headquarters. Winning raffle tickets were announced for cool prizes and all three of those men from downtown threw out the first pitch. Soon it was time to play ball and that's exactly what was screamed by everyone at the end. Play Ball!

Once the games began, Quinn McKendry had two hits and struck out five on the mound playing in a new division, as the Cubs beat the Mets, 12-9. Javier Diaz, Eamon Langdon and Cohen Springer contributed with key hits on the field played just after the ceremony. In other games, Charlotte Leichtman knocked in teammates Morgan DeLaPlante and Brielle Mellerson for a Rebels 2-0 victory over the Diamonds and Lydia Foglia helped lead the Orioles to a 5-4 victory over the Giants in two Rookie Girls games.

Six other games were played throughout the day but due to the rain early Friday, field conditions were determined unplayable by the HNPY-BL volunteers.
