

“Heads” on Colvin

This Halloween masterpiece of “Heads” was created by Sarah Hemminway at 211 Colvin near Hertel Avenues. The display was inspired by lyrics in Neil Young’s song “Only love can break your heart” and a shopping spree of various heads and wigs. The “Hide Your Head Inside a Dream” will be on display until after the “Trick or Treaters” stop by.

Cozens and Olafsson Both Belong in NHL

When the Buffalo Sabres drafted Dylan Cozens in the first round this year, he projected as the second line scoring center the team desperately needs, but not this season. The 18 year old was expected to return to junior hockey for another season with a realistic chance to make the Sabres roster as a 19 year old in the 2020-21 season. When Cozens broke his thumb in July during prospects camp it seemed to dim his already miniscule chance to compete for a roster spot this season. But with Cozens outstanding performance in camp so far he looks to be ready for the NHL right now.

Cozens was the Sabres best player in a preseason game at Toronto in September where his speed and offensive skills were on display against the Leafs NHL veteran laden lineup. Cozens has substantially outplayed the incumbent second line center Casy Mittlestadt and has earned a roster spot. It may surprise fans to learn that teams already have players slotted into assigned roles at the NHL or Minor league levels before training camps begin. Rarely are there surprises where a player rises above expectations. But Cozens is one of these exceptions. If the Sabres return him to junior when he has proven that he is NHL ready then they are not filling jobs based on performance as they should which would be a mistake.

Victor Olafsson's two goals against the Toronto Maple Leafs at the Key-bank Center on Saturday September 21st showed that he is the real deal when it comes to goal scorers. Playing on the top line with Jack Eichel and Sam Reinhart the trio presented a formidable challenge for the Leafs scoring three goals with Sam Reinhart adding a single.

Olafsson scored in two very different types of situations. With the Sabres running their power play off the popular new 1-3-1 format, Olafsson dented the twine with his one timer off a perfectly timed dot to dot pass from Jack Eichel. In the third period with the score tied 2-2, His quick wrist shot gave the Sabres a 3-2 lead after a Sam Reinhart pass from behind the goal line found him alone in front.

These goals showed Olafsson has the versatility a goal scorer to establish consistency. While one timers make spectacular play you can't make a living in pro hockey as a one trick pony. You've got to be able and willing to get to the net and score from the blue paint to be legitimate NHL sniper. That's how Jeff Skinner scored the majority of his team leading 40 goals last season. Olafsson is expected to score at least 25 goals this season. He will meet those expectations if he continues to keep his nose in front of the net.

Beta Gang

Family get-togethers are always fun and a good way of reminiscing certain things that happened in years past. Not always "The Good Old Days". Some of the incidents that occurred when my children were growing up on the old West Side of Buffalo, were not the best. There are Things one might recall vividly, while other memories are a bit hazy. Keep in mind that the following incidents I refer to happened in the sixties. The West Side back then was not always the best atmosphere to raise eight children, but most of it was good. The neighborhood ethnic scene was changing slowly. What was almost all an Italian American neighborhood was now seeing an influx of Hispanic Americans. Gangs began to form much like the ones in the movie "West Side Story". It was fortunate that unlike the movie, there was only one and there were no gang wars. Still, their presence was felt and very visible. I will recount three different incidents I personally had with these "gangs". It would take up too much valuable space in the Rocket to go into all three in one week so I will break it into three separate stories. This is the first and the mildest.

In the neighborhood we lived in on 15th street, the main attraction for the kids in the summer was the Massachusetts Avenue swimming pool, located right around the corner, and within walking distance of our home. The Butler-Michell youth club was also located there and attracted a lot of local youngsters. After their chores, our children would occasionally spend the day at the pool and the playground behind it. There were lifeguards present at the pool and the older children would watch the younger siblings. Childhood relations formed with other neighborhood children who also found this the best neighborhood attraction. Most of it was good. There was one problem, it was also the stomping grounds of one of the neighborhood's toughest gangs, Beta. These were mostly teenage young men of one ethnic group and mostly did not bother anyone unless you crossed them. If one did, they simply took care of the annoyance in a gang related way. No guns or knives, just hurtful extremes. Just want to add that the beatings were mostly to instill fear and were not brutal. I would assume they felt they needed to do this to retain control of the area. The Massachusetts Avenue Pool and playground was their territory to rule. Everyone was aware of their presence there and avoided any contact that was not necessary. I am not sure if they ever actually went into the swimming pool, just hung out, smoking and trying to look tough. It was best to just try to ignore them and let them be. That is, unless they crossed the line.

In the first of the three incidents that happened to me and my family, and like I stated, the mildest, my eldest son recalled the day I confronted these tough guys. Since I had a couple of good-looking teenage daughters who frequented this pool, something like this was bound to happen. One night at the supper table one of my sons related to me something said at the pool. It was an inappropriate remark made by one of these gang members to one of my daughters. (I found out later it was my wife.) Now, what would any red blooded American father do in this case? So that night I calmly walked over to the pool and went directly to the gang leader. My son, who was recalling this incident, thought I was about to die. Here I was in the middle of a bunch of dangerous thugs demanding an apology for the inappropriate remark made toward my daughter. Now, normally at this point we would say tune in next week to see what happened. No, I will tell you what happened as I have other stories to tell. The ringleader went face to face with me and said, "you want what"? I did not wet myself and remained composed and demanded again, an apology. After a long silent stare, I was not sure what was going to happen next. I do remember I was a bit taller and bigger than anyone of these young men and that could have had something to do with what transpired next. He ended the silence and calmly asked which one of his members made the remark. The perpetrator was pointed out and told in a not so nice way to apologize, which he meekly did. From that moment on we became friendly and my family was now under the protection of the Beta gang at the Massachusetts Avenue swimming pool. These were not bad guys, just looked intimidating with their sheer numbers. That will come out in next week's column.

Next week, the second incident, which is much more intense and violent, also has this same gang involved. Only this time we were somewhat on the same side. As a hint it has to do with one of the riots that occurred during the sixties, right in our neighborhood... stay tuned. Email JBORTZE@aol.com or find him on Facebook.com

Ask Rusty - Working at 65, So What About Medicare?

Dear Rusty: My husband turns 65 in December of this year, but he is employed and will be on his employer's health insurance at least through this school year (May 2020). How should we inform Medicare of this situation and must we let Medicare know that he is presently insured by BCBS? When must we let Medicare know about these details? I know there is a certain window when no health questions are asked but what is that time frame? If my husband quits teaching in May, when does he let Medicare know he wants to start Part A and B in June 2020? Is there only open enrollment in the 3-month window of his birthday? Signed: Confused by Medicare

Dear Confused: If your husband has creditable healthcare coverage from his employer, he need not enroll in Medicare when he turns 65. His creditable employer coverage will exempt him from a late enrollment penalty when he enrolls in Medicare Part B (or D) later ("creditable" coverage is a group plan with at least 20 participants). When his employer coverage ends he will enter a Special Enrollment Period (SEP) which will last for 8 months from the date his employer coverage ends. As long as he enrolls in Medicare Part B before his SEP expires, your husband will not incur a late enrollment penalty. To sign up for Part B shortly before his employer coverage ends or during the 8 months after his employer ends, he should complete and submit an Application for Enrollment in Part B (CMS-40B) and a Request for Employment Information (CMS-L564), both of which can be found at this website: <https://www.cms.gov/Medicare/CMS-Forms/CMS-Forms/CMS-Forms-List.html>.

Your husband may want to enroll in Part B prior to his employment coverage ending in order to avoid a lapse in healthcare coverage (it usually takes a couple months for Medicare Part B to become effective). Note that unless your husband is contributing to a Health Savings Account (HSA), he may wish to enroll in Medicare Part A at age 65. Medicare Part A (hospitalization coverage) is free if your husband is also eligible for Social Security, and he will need to be enrolled in Part A in order to enroll in Part B (doctors and outpatient services) and Part D (prescription drug coverage), both of which have a premium associated with them. He will also need to be enrolled in Part A to collect Social Security after age 65.

If your husband is already collecting Social Security when he turns 65, he will be automatically enrolled in both Part A and Part B, but he can, if desired, decline Part B until his employer coverage ends. Please also note that if your husband wishes Part D prescription drug coverage (provided by private insurance carriers) he must enroll in a plan within 63 days of his existing employer drug coverage ending to avoid a Part D late enrollment penalty. After age 65, one cannot go more than 63 days without creditable prescription drug coverage without incurring a late enrollment penalty for enrolling in a Part D plan later.

For your awareness, if your husband does not enroll in Medicare before his SEP expires, he will not be able to enroll again until the General Enrollment Period (GEP) the following year (the GEP runs from January through March of each year, for coverage to start on July 1 of that year). I suggest your husband enrolls in Medicare a couple months before his employment ends (to avoid a lapse in coverage), but in any case he should not miss enrolling during the special enrollment period, because the late enrollment penalties are significant and are recurring (he'll pay the premium penalty for the rest of his life).

Finally, there is no "window" for qualifying medical questions to be asked when enrolling in Medicare; everyone who is eligible by virtue of paying FICA payroll taxes, or via a spouse who did so, is covered regardless of their current health.

Buffalo Rocket

This Week's Featured Friends:

EMERY

Emery is a pretty black and white girl who has a white streak on her back as well as a white face, bib and paws. She is rather shy and does not like other cats. Therefore she is looking for a home where she can call the humans all her own and does not have to share their love. Come to the shelter and see if this cute one year old is the right cat for you.

Tour Colonial Circle Homes!

Join Explore Buffalo at the beginning of autumn to tour home interiors in the neighborhood surrounding one of Buffalo's magnificent Olmsted circles, Colonial Circle. Colonial Circle is surrounded by beautiful streets of historic homes representing a range of architectural styles that will be featured as part of this tour, including Lafayette Avenue, Richmond Avenue, and Bidwell Parkway. A variety of these wonderful homes will be open for tour patrons to tour from 1 to 5 PM on Saturday, September 28.

The tour headquarters is St. John's-Grace Episcopal Church at 51 Colonial Circle.

The stunning interior of this church built in 1927, with its beautiful stained glass windows, will be open for tour guests to tour as part of the Autumn Tour of Homes.

Neighborhood History & Architecture Lecture: At 1 PM on September 28th, a lecture on neighborhood history and architectural style will be presented by Chuck LaChiusa, Explore Buffalo Master Docent and creator of the website buffaloah.com. The lecture will be approximately 45 minutes long inside St. John's Grace Episcopal Church and is open to all ticket holders. This lecture is the perfect way to start your tour experience - there will be ample time following the lecture to see all of the participating homes.

This lecture will also be given prior to the tour event on Wednesday, September 25th at 7 PM, inside St. John's Grace. The lecture on the 25th is free and open to the public, and will also be an opportunity to pick up your tour tickets in advance of the tour.

Event Details: Advance reservations are strongly encouraged for this tour.

Interior photography is not permitted in the homes on this tour.

Typically, it takes approximately ninety minutes to two hours to tour all of the participating homes.

This tour is rain or shine, so dress for the weather. Comfortable walking shoes are recommended.

All of the homes are within moderate walking distance of one another. Driving from house to house is not recommended.

Ticket Pickup: Your ticket is a booklet that will list all of the open homes and include a map to guide you to each one. Pick up your ticket on the day of the tour beginning at 12:30 PM on September 28 at St. John's-Grace Episcopal Church at 51 Colonial Circle.
