Bills Annihilate New England Patriots 38-9

With their 38-9 beat down of the New England Patriots on Monday night, the Buffalo Bills completed the first sweep of the Pats by an AFC team in 20 years. The Bills exorcised the demons of New England 20 season domination of the division and Josh Allen showed how easily he could destroy a Bill Belichick defense. The Patriots had no answer for the Bills passing game. Pro Football Talks Power Rankings currently has the Bills ranked as the number one team in the NFL.

The Patriot took an early 3-0 lead and the Bills held a slim 10-9 lead after one quarter. But Josh Allen and the Bills passing game could not be denied as he passed for four touchdowns, three to Stefon Diggs, The Bills toyed with New England as they continuously attempted touchdown strikes to players like Devan Singletree and Taiwan Jones (who dropped the ball on a sure score) who have not caught a TD pass this season, as the Bills sought to break the record of throwing TD passes to 14 different players in one season.

The Bills showed their dominance over the great Belichick on a fake punt

in the first half when they lined up Siran Neal as a wide out and the Patriots failed to cover him. On a direct snap to up back Jequan Johnson he threw a pass to the wide open Neal for a first down. The 29 point margin of victory was the most by the Patriots in New England in the 21 season's Belichick has coached the team.

The Bills gained 31 first downs against New England which is an incredible amount for a team which already led the NFL with an average of 20 first downs per game. The Bills lead the league in scoring efficiency, scoring on 48.8% of their possessions. They out gained the Pats 474 yards to 201, first downs 31 to 11, passing yards 344-56 and time of possession 39:41 to 20:19.

The Bills are on a great run putting up big point totals, eight times they have scored more than 30 points in a game. They are playing at such a high level that it will take a great play made by a great player to beat them, like the 43 yard Hail Mary pass to Arizona's Deandre Hopkins who outfought three Bills to catch the ball in the end zone with two seconds on the game clock.

Fun Facts: Stefon Diggs has 69 catches for first downs. That's more than his total catches for last season with Minnesota. Diggs leads the NFL in catches with 120 and passing yards with 1459. Josh Allen is third in passing yards with 1420.

Allen passed for 320 yards completing 27 of 36 with four touchdowns and Dawson Knox and Taiwan Jones dropped easy TD catches.

The Bills are the only team to outgain opponents by 250 yards in back to back road games (Broncos and Patriots) since 1961.

Stefon Diggs Josh Allen Buffalo Bills.

Ask Rusty - I'm 66. When Should I Claim Social Security?

Dear Rusty: I'd like to get advice on when I should begin taking my Social Security benefit. I turned 66 in October of 2020. Signed: Pondering Retirement

Dear Pondering: Deciding when to claim your Social Security benefit is a personal choice which should consider several factors, most importantly:

- Your need for the money at this time
- Your current health and expected longevity
- Your marital status

Since you have already reached your full retirement age (FRA) for Social Security purposes, you are no longer subject to the "earnings test" which limits how much you can earn. So, working won't affect your monthly SS benefit amount in any way. But it could influence your decision on when to claim, because if working enables you to delay claiming Social Security until after your FRA, your benefit amount when you eventually claim will be higher.

In October 2020 you started earning Delayed Retirement Credits (DRCs) at the rate of .67% for each full month you delay past your FRA. That means that for each full year you delay claiming, your benefit will be 8% more. You can earn DRCs until you are 70, at which point your Social Security benefit would reach maximum and be 32% more than it would be at your FRA. But delaying only makes sense if you don't urgently need the money now, and if you expect to enjoy at least average longevity (which is about 84 for a man your age today). If you delay until age 70 to claim, your "breakeven age" (the age at which you will have collected the same amount of SS money as if you claim now) will be about 83. And if you live longer than that, you'll continue to enjoy that higher SS benefit for the rest of your life, and you'll collect more in cumulative lifetime benefits.

A higher benefit at an older age can be quite beneficial to offset inflation and is especially helpful if you're married and your wife outlives you. If you are married and you predecease your wife, she will get 100% of the benefit you are receiving at your death, if that is more than her own benefit from her own lifetime work record and if she has reached her own FRA when she claims her widow's benefit. So, for example, if you claim now at your FRA, your widow later will get your FRA amount when you pass. But if you delay past your FRA to claim, when you pass your widow will get the higher benefit amount you are receiving because you delayed claiming. In other words, when you claim your Social Security benefits can, if you are married, affect the benefit your widow will get if you die first.

So, the bottom line is this: In deciding when to claim your Social Security you should consider your current financial needs, your health and expected longevity, and your marital status. Carefully evaluating the above factors will help you to decide the best age at which to claim your Social Security benefits.

New Years

As of this writing we are about to celebrate the coming of a new year. The year 2021 will begin and we can say goodbye to 2020. I think it is safe to say that this last year, or the past 365 calendar days, has been one to remember with many regrets. What seemed to start out as a banner year, as far as the economy, improving medication to make you live longer, and just the outlook of a bright future was anticipated as 2020 began. We now know that did not happen. Covid 19 has affected almost everyone in one way or another, not only here in the US but all over the entire world. We are not suffering alone, this tragic killing epidemic has brought many countries to their knees trying to deal with it. Shut downs have been a way of life and a thing we have had to live with.

With the new vaccine, things may change and down the road there could be light at the end of the tunnel. Not the dark and gloomy days we have been living through. I do recall back at the start of the epidemic, a rising death toll made us realize the seriousness of the virus. It was recommended that everyone stay in their house and not leave for any reason. One by one the different states went into what we now call "lockdown." At the time we were in Florida which is the winter home of millions of Senior citizens. This group was singled out as suffering the most deaths related to the virus. I saw firsthand paranoia take hold of most of my elderly neighbors. Seems like some were so overly cautious that they were even afraid to wave, hello. Handmade and improvised masks appeared, that is, if you did see someone out of their house. It did work to some degree as Florida, in the beginning, being a larger state, did not suffer the death rate that other heavily populated states did. No one knew what was going to happen. Alternatives had to be found to manage day to day living as far as eating and providing daily needs without leaving your home. For some reason toilet paper was a hot item and disappeared off the shelves. Pickup and delivery became a way of life. Dine in restaurants closed, construction stopped, only essential stores were open. You could not even get a haircut.

How could you just stay in your house? Those that had to work, how could they live, having to stay at home for months. Grocery stores were open but no one wanted to take a chance and go shopping. I did something that I try to avoid. Shopping at Wal-Mart. Too many made in China products and I happen to be a buy American person. However food at Wal-Mart has to be home grown so I did all my grocery shopping there during the first months of Covid 19. Ordered online and picked it up at least once a week. After a while I donned a mask and did my own food shopping at Publix, the large grocery chain in the south.

Slowly things did open up and it was not back to normal, but there was a semblance of some kind of return to normalcy. Being as the weather is always warm in Florida, outdoor dining was soon allowed and eventually 50% indoor. It was a shock to the system returning to New York state and all the restrictions. Like two different worlds, but that is the way it always is.

That was last year. We are now on the verge of a new year. What is New Year's day? Actually in reality it is just another day. The sun comes up in the morning and sets in the evening, nothing about the day itself is different. What makes this particular 24 hours so significant is that we actually in one way or another look at it as special. Because it is natural to always look at any beginning with hope and optimism. Hope that in some way it will be better than the last 365 days. How many times have you been sad to see a year end? No matter how good a year it had been, it seems you always see the new year as going to be even better. You have the feeling we are going to have a happy new year. It can only be better than the year that just past no matter what. We look at any new year with optimism and starry eyed beliefs that it is going to be a good one. We fill our minds with resolutions of brighter things to come. We want a slimmer body, a larger bank account, new friends and relationships, a year of good health. Some of it does happen, sometimes. One thing we do know for sure, it has to be better than this last year. Happy New Year!
