Time To Win A Championship!

This season, the Orioles in the Boys Triple AAA Division of the Hertel North Park Youth Baseball League have not had a good year.

As a matter of fact, you might say that it's "been for the Birds!"

But Mad-dex Beale and team-mate Joey LoTempio both homered in the fourth and fifth innings to erase a 12-0 deficit to the Tigers and beat the stripes out of those animals, 21-13 for the team's biggest win of the season in the first round of the Playoffs this past Monday night. LoTempio blasted a three run homerun in the fourth to put the Orioles on the board, 21-3. Then, an inning later, Beale hit a grand slam home run for a five run fifth and the rally was just beginning. After finishing the regular season at 1-10-1, the Birds face the Angels in the next round and are already blessed.

It's Playoff time in Shoshone Park for as many as 58 teams as clubs are ceded in divisional brackets to decide which one wins a house Championship in the instructional little league divisions. On any given day, an upset can happen and a season is over after two losses. Here's some more scores.

Linus Ward, Clay

Lazore and Jace Petti pitched two innings apiece and were helped out by an Isa Thompson home run to lead the Mariners to a shutout victory over the Yankees under the lights Monday night. Carter Horan homered and had the game winning RBI to lead the White Sox to a 3-2 victory over the Athletics and Jack Pagnen Kromer played a great second base for the Royals over the Blue Jays.

Six more divisions have started their Playoffs as this column is being written. They are Major Boys, Double AA, Rookie Girls, Rookie Boys, Minor Girls and Major Girls. Each team needs to continue winning in order to move on to the next round. If a team suffers their first loss, a second defeat eliminates them from competition and an early end to the Baseball or Softball season. No teams have been eliminated as of yet.

In Rookie Boys, Charlie Koehn hit a two run triple in the fourth inning and teammate Carter Tronolone doubled in two runs as the Orioles shut out the Angels. The Red Sox defeated the Twins, 8-5. The Mariners topped the Astros and the Tampa Rays defeated the Yankees, 5-3.

In Rookie Girls from Saturday, Olive Barrett had three RBI's to help lead the Diamonds to an upset win over the Angels, 7-3. The Devils defeated the Stars 4-1 and Aubrey Jones blasted a three run homerun for the Comets in a 8-5 victory over the Shamrocks.

Ask Rusty – What Benefits Do My Wife, and my Ex-wife, Get If I Die?

Dear Rusty: I am a 77 year old married male. I am retired and started drawing Social Security at age 66, and my monthly amount is a little over $3,000. My present wife is 52 and employed, and we have been married for 22 years. I also have an ex-wife who is 85, not married, and drawing Social Security. My ex-wife and I were married 13 years. When I am deceased, what happens to my Social Security benefits? When my present wife decides to receive SS benefits, would she draw the higher benefit of our monthly amounts? Would my ex-wife be able to increase her benefit? Signed: Planning Ahead

Dear Planning Ahead: In the event of your death, here is how Social Security eligibility would work for your current wife and for your ex-wife:

For your current wife, unless she is disabled, she cannot collect a survivor benefit as your widow until she is at least 60 years old. However, if she claims her survivor benefit before reaching her full retirement age (FRA), it will be reduced. Claimed at age 60, her benefit as your widow would be 71.5% of the amount you were receiving at your death. If she waited beyond age 60 to claim, her survivor benefit would continue to grow until it reached maximum at her FRA of age 67 (100% of the benefit you were receiving when you died). She would also have the option to wait until age 62 and claim her own reduced personally-earned SS benefit first while allowing her survivor benefit to grow to maximum at age 67; or she could take her reduced survivor benefit only first and allow her personally-earned SS benefit to grow to maximum at age 70. She should choose whichever strategy would give her the highest benefit for the rest of her life.

Note, too, that if your current wife were to collect any benefit before reaching her full retirement age (67) and she works, she would be subject to Social Security's earnings test. The earnings test limits how much can be earned before some of her benefits are taken away by Social Security. For reference, the 2022 earnings limit is $19,560, but it changes annually. If the annual earnings limit in force when your wife claims is exceeded, and she hasn't yet reached age 67, SS will take away benefits equal to $1 for every $2 over the limit. The limit is higher, and the penalty is less in the year FRA is reached, and the earnings test goes away when your current wife is 67.

Regarding your ex-wife, if you die first, and because you were married for more than 10 years, your ex-wife will be entitled to collect a survivor benefit from you, if that amount (what you were receiving at your death) is more than she is currently receiving based on her own lifetime work record (she would get the higher of the two amounts). Your ex-wife would need to contact Social Security to claim her survivor benefit from you, and your ex-wife collecting a survivor benefit from you will not affect your current wife's benefit in any way – both can get their full survivor benefit from you independent of each other and neither will be reduced because more than one wife is collecting.

For clarity, since you and your ex-wife are both already collecting Social Security, your ex-wife may be entitled to a spousal boost from you while you are both living, if her own personally-earned FRA benefit amount is less than 50% of your SS benefit, and that would have no effect on either your own current benefit or your current wife's survivor entitlement. Your ex-wife would need to contact Social Security directly to apply for her ex-spouse benefit from you while you are both living.

Science Museum To Open Rooftop Deck For "Night Sky Views"

The Buffalo Museum of Science will open its rooftop on three Friday nights this summer for "Twilight at the Museum" evening hours. From 8 to 11 p.m. on July 29, August 26, and September 23, the Museum's rooftop deck will be open to guests of all ages (weather permitting) for an evening look at Buffalo's nighttime summer sky, and Museum staff and astronomers will be on site for twilight talks. All of the Museum's exhibits and Antarctic Dinosaurs: The Exhibition will be available to explore.

As the summer sky changes from month to month, each evening will offer different celestial views:

Friday, July 29: Sunset to Stars

Catch a sunset view of the Buffalo city skyline early on, and watch the stars come out after an evening of exploring.

Friday, August 26: The Summer Triangle

What's that overhead? Learn the names and history of some of the brightest stars in the summer skies. You may uncover some surprises along the way.

Friday, September 23: Seeing the Solar System

The beginning of autumn brings longer nights, and a chance to see some of the most beautiful worlds in our own celestial neighborhood: planets, moons and more! In the event of rain, the Museum will remain open and astronomy talks will take place indoors.

Rooftop access is included with admission or tickets to Antarctic Dinosaurs: The Exhibition, and free for Museum Members. Separate registration is required for each evening, and the Museum encourages guests to preregister at the Museum's event calendar at sciencebuff.org or by calling 716-896-5200.

Man's Best Friend (And Women Too)

My wonderful Apricot Poodle, Angel.

As far back as I can remember we always had a dog and a cat. When I was a kid, seldom if ever did we put the dog on a leash or the cat in a cage. They were free to roam as they pleased and usually were just there. Not a big deal and just considered a pet and nothing more. They ate mostly table scraps and were happy to do so. They always seemed content with whatever they got and seemed thankful. Our dog would follow whoever was going somewhere. My older brothers and me, he or she would just always be there. I used to walk the furthest from Fargo and Massachusetts to the foot of Ferry Street so our dog would always follow me. He or she would be taken for granted as just a pet who usually did what you wanted to please you. A constant companion. Never a problem, just there, always. With undying love and devotion. Naturally, we loved them back, but it was so routine I guess we really did not appreciate the bond. Dogs we had were mongrels, mixed breeds that were a combination of all the neighborhood K9s. One thing you did not want was a female as when she came into heat, you had to contend with the males looking for love. Then having to find homes for the many pups. Always better to have a male if you had the pick of the litter. There were no rescue dogs and never a purebred. Just a lot of dogs and cats wandering around. They were part of the family but not like today. Today people have mostly state of the art breeds and treat them not only like family but royalty. Special foods, beds, medicines, daily walks, expensive grooming, and of course personal loving. Not that we did not love our mongrels, but it was different. They were just there and taken for granted. My first pure breed was a male German Shepherd. Given to me by a friend who had a female and wanted to mate them and sell the puppies. He had all the papers and was a wonderful dog with my kids. I learned to train him and had him in dog shows and we won ribbons and even a cup at one event. Best of show. My next three dogs were Golden Retrievers. Docile and loving pets, not stoic like the Shepard. Seemed like with each dog the bonding got stronger. Increasingly with each one the compassion was overwhelming. They became part of the family, a big part. The passings, which is a part of life as we know, became harder and harder to take. With the heartbreak of losing the last Golden Retriever after 15 years, we vowed, "No more dogs". That lasted a few years. When my wife got sick, my thoughts were that a small lap dog would help. We got a small toy apricot poodle named Teddy. A rescue dog that needed some loving. He got that all right. Problem was when we got him, he was 11 years old and only lasted two years before succumbing to lung cancer. Again, it was devastating and so hurtful. "No more dogs" was the cry. That was until the woman from the rescue organization had another female Apricot poodle that mirrored our Teddy. We took her in and named her Angel and she was at my wife's side right up to the day she died. She was in the bed with her when she passed. Angel was without her Mama for the first time. That left her with just me to take care of her. She had such a bond with her mama that I was just there. Had to do little in the way of caretaking for this little fur ball. That has changed as she is now dependent on me. My companion, the only female in my life. My dinner partner. I only go to restaurants that have outdoor patios so I can bring her with me. Florida was easy as most have them. Here you must ask. She is not a problem and just sits next to me quietly. I am so thankful I have her. She follows me wherever I go and sits next to me in each room. I have a spot on the bed for her as I find some comfort in that. I had a scare as she started choking in the middle of the night. Panic set in. Are there emergency rooms for dogs? She ended up ok, but it made me aware that I cannot lose this one at this time. Her yearly checkup is in October. That will be moved up. Let us face it, pets are now family.
