Caring For Animals Above By Caring For The Ground Below

The seeds of success for Emere Nieves and her eco-friendly, organic land-care company Gardeness Inc, were planted generations ago with her grandmother and mother.

"They planted shrubs that naturally attract birds. By caring for the earth they had a positive impact on our ecosystem above," said Nieves, who founded her accredited organic land care company in 2018.

These influences led Nieves to a career in natural landscaping. She managed gardens for the Buffalo Olmsted Park Conservancy and cared for the Delaware Park Rose Garden and the Japanese Garden of Buffalo.

Gardeness Inc. incorporates native plants found in Buffalo to produce fertile soil and to benefit birds, bees, and other living things.

Dogwood, redbuds, snakebark maple, red maple, American beech, eastern white pine, and witch hazel are trees unique to the Buffalo-Niagara region. As for ferns, flowering plants and shrubs: spicebush, common ninebark, butterfly weed, elderberry, and cranberry viburnum are popular.

"Bird feathers, claws, beaks, and feathers contain keratin. They depend on consuming keratin rich caterpillars, which are hosted by native plants. A lack of native plants creates food deserts for birds, causes a decline in their population, and disrupts the ecosystem," added Nieves.

In the same way shovels, hand trowels, and pruning shears are important tools, social media is a tool used by Nieves to cultivate clients.

"Facebook is important for our business to share how we are positive stewards of our planet. Friends and customers share posts. We received many referrals from gardening groups on Facebook. It is also a great platform to create ads, which also brings in new business," said Nieves.

As the mother of three children, Nieves plans to share her passion to produce eco-friendly landscapes.

"There are many ways to teach children to care for the environment, including starting an organic land-care business," concluded Nieves.

SGT Presents THE SECRET GARDEN: Spring Version

Continued from page one. Michael Oliver-Walline's ability as a director to create a magical and enchanting world is a perfect match for this classic tale. SGT is poised to continue our legacy of quality, immersive experiences featuring actor debuts from an exciting 'third generation' with SGT Academy alum Ella Hinkin and Clark Garvey," says Executive Director Kristin Bentley.

Both Hinklin and Garvey have been students of SGT's theatre education program since 2017, but this is their first show with the company. Hinklin's mother, four-time Artie Award winning actor Jenn Stafford, is also featured in THE SECRET GARDEN. This is the first time the duo has appeared on stage together. "Doing a show with my mom is so much fun. Since I was really little I've heard her practicing and singing- It's exciting to be a part of that," says Hinklin.

Stafford had this to say. "It has been such an amazing experience getting to spend this time with Ella. I oscillate between these warm teaching/sharing moments where we get to talk about life and tinkering with art and timing, then this giving her space to be and grow and find footing times, interspersed with tsunami level waves of ugly-cry-blubbering-proud-mama feels watching what she is capable of."

Ask Rusty – Veteran Asks About Disability and Ex-Spouse Benefits

Dear Rusty: I am a military veteran with a total & permanent disability. I was married for over ten years to a military man who has since honorably separated from military service. I was originally on Social Security disability, which automatically converted to regular Social Security retirement benefits when I turned 65 — with the amount remaining at the “disabled” level instead of the “regular” rate based on my Social Security employment contribution record. Why wasn’t my “regular” Social Security rate used when I turned 65? Also, I contacted Social Security regarding my ex-husband’s Social Security since I was married to him for over 10 years but was told I am not entitled to a portion of his Social Security benefit. Why not? I was told the amount I would receive wouldn’t subtract from his SS entitlement. Signed: Disabled Veteran

Dear Disabled Veteran: First, I want to thank you for your service to our country. Your sacrifice is sincerely appreciated, and I’ll be honored to answer your Social Security questions.

Regarding your current Social Security amount versus your previous disability amount, the Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) benefit you were receiving was, in fact, the amount you were entitled to at your full retirement age, even though you claimed disability benefits earlier. Your SSDI benefit, when awarded, was computed using your entire lifetime earnings history up to the point that you became disabled, resulting in you getting your earned full amount as your disability benefit before you reached your full retirement age. And that is why the amount stayed the same when it automatically converted to your normal SS retirement benefit (at your full retirement age which, by the way, was 66 if you were born before 1955). Said simply, SSDI is the full Social Security amount you have earned up to the point you stopped earning, so it stays the same when you reach your full retirement age.

As for additional benefits from your ex-husband, although you meet the length of marriage rule for ex-spouse benefits, there are additional criteria as well — you must not have remarried and remained so, and your ex-husband must be already receiving his own Social Security benefit (unless you’ve been divorced at least two years, in which case your ex need only be eligible to collect). But you can only get an additional benefit, known as a “spousal boost,” if you meet all the other criteria and half (50%) of the benefit your ex-husband is/was entitled to at his full retirement age is more than your current Social Security benefit. Since Social Security said you aren’t entitled to an ex-spouse benefit, you apparently do not meet all of the eligibility criteria mentioned above. And to address your last point, if you had met all criteria and been entitled to an ex-spouse benefit it, indeed, would not have affected your ex-husband’s benefit in any way.

Again, please accept my sincere gratitude for your military service. You may wish to visit the “For Veterans” section on our website.

The Universe

The readers of this column are getting tired of my going on about the loss of my wife. I respect that and know it is getting overused. This will be the last, but I want to get it off my chest. We all struggle at one time or another with the loss of a loved one. Seems it comes at various stages of life. Close relatives or friends. How we manage the grief is different depending on how near and dear the person was. The big question is why? Why do we have to die? We are born with the knowledge that we will someday leave this life as we know it.

The question is what happens next. Since I am older and cannot look into a future life all I can do is look for answers. Why does this happen that we no longer have life in a body created to live on this planet. That part must be over, that life has ended. Is there a new life? Is there a heaven as most of us believe? Personally, I have a problem with the thought that we will someday meet again with the human appearance that we had here. Somehow that does not resonate with me. I would like to believe that, but I have doubts. There very well may be an after-life and I do believe in that but what, is the question.

Perhaps I am wrong and there is a paradise where everyone is happy, and we all meet with those loved ones who have passed before us. That would be wonderful and something to look forward to. Still cannot seem to wrap my mind around that. So many people have said to me, "You will be together again someday." That would be nice. So, I am searching for answers and have been since the day she died. Why am I still here, lonely and having to make a new life at this stage? Must be a reason for all this.

Looking for answers anywhere I can find them.

I am not a book reader as I lose focus. My mind wanders as what I am reading will trigger a thought and I go off on a tangent. So, I have been spending a lot of time on YouTube. The answers to any basic questions can be found on the internet. Those are basic questions. What is the temperature outside? Not the real questions we want answers too. What happens after we make the transition? There are so many things we do not know. We are so limited in our knowledge about what is out there and beyond.

Elon Musk is a modern-day genius, like him or not. He is brilliant and seems to have abilities beyond those of most men. I bring him up as he has knowledge of outer space for some reason. They even suggest he is an alien which he denies. I also want to mention that his goal is to form a colony on Mars. Far-fetched? But in the different research I have looked at, there is a connection.

In a previous column I have written about reincarnation. Young children four and five-year-old sitting down and playing Mozart and Beethoven on the piano with no lessons. Young people know math beyond what is being taught. No question here that there is a connection with another life. It is the one I recently read that hit me. A Russian boy who said he was a Martian in a former life a long time ago. We must realize here there is no time in space. Could have been thousands of years ago or like just yesterday. The things he says are enough to be convincing that he did at one time live on Mars. He is now older, of course a genius, and still believes he was a Martian. Said he looked different from his earthly appearance but that was because the air was not the same.

What are we saying here? We have a person who is determined to live on Mars and seeing his accomplishment, we must believe he will do that. We have a person who said he has already lived on Mars. Science fiction? Or is this the beginning in finding the answers we are looking for. What is out there? Will we someday know? I will be dying to find out.

ADOPT A PET Sponsored By The Buffalo Rocket

This Week's Featured Friend: POPPY

Poppy is peppy friendly girl that came in with a wound on her neck and some very thin fur and both have healed quite nicely with some medication and TLC from our shelter volunteers/staff. She has a life of the party attitude towards life and is happy to cruise around town taking in all the sniffs or toss a toy around in the yard. Poppy is just as much fun as her name and enjoys spending time with her human friends.

If you would like to meet any of the adoptable dogs, please fill out an application online (if you are not already pre-approved), call the shelter, and leave a message with your name and phone number and the dog you're interested in. Have patience, and they will call you back when they can. From there, a time will be scheduled for you to come and meet the dog. Please be patient, and remember they are very short staffed at the moment. Applications can be found at <https://friendsofcbas.org/adopt>
