Leaders Save Lives Program Gives Students a Chance at Scholarships

This winter high school and college students can help save lives and be eligible to win a scholarship of up to $2,500 by hosting an American Red Cross blood drive. Registration is now open through November 15th to host drives between December 15th, 2015 and January 15th, 2016.

“Winter is a difficult time to collect enough blood to meet patient needs with inclement weather and seasonal illnesses reducing the number of volunteer donors that come out to give,” said Red Cross Communications Manager, Cara Leyna Noble. “Our Leaders their friends and family to give blood.”

The Leaders Save Lives program encourages community-minded high school and college students to host blood drives to help maintain the blood supply around the winter holidays. Blood donations made at high school, university and college blood drives account for as much as 20 percent of blood donations through the Red Cross. Around the winter

These Are the People in Your Neighborhood...

LaKisha Willis has been a Buffalo firefighter for six years. It's not something she ever thought she could do, but now she knows she can. “Ordinary people doing extraordinary things,” that's what LaKisha and her fellow firefighters do on a daily basis.

Firefighter Willis would like to remind everyone to check the battery in their Carbon Monoxide detectors as well as smoke detectors. “This is the time of the year when we are turning our furnaces on for the first time of the season. It is important to have these detectors working properly to detect any possible leaks or other problems.” Willis continues on to say “most CO alarms expire after 5-7 years. They need to be checked and tested regularly, especially at the beginning of heating season.”

If your CO detector does sound, you must act quickly to help protect you and your family. Get everyone out of the house, including family pets, and call 911 immediately.

The Adventures of...
Rocket Man
by Doug Smith

'The Intern'

About 30 minutes in, Rocket Man realized he'd seen this movie before. Only the protagonist's principal prop was a bumbershoot, not a well-pressed suit, and arrived by air rather than sedan.

Robert DeNiro, meet "Mary Poppins," playing games, all sorts.

"The Intern," from celebrated writer and director Nancy Meyers, enlists bored-stiff retiree DeNiro into a "senior" internship with a slick garment-trade start-up called "About the Fit."

Rocket Man has no idea whether such an employment program does exist in the real world but it did make him think of his role writing baseball at a newspaper where his three bosses' ages don't add up to his. It was a rough, technology-challenged start but one of them wrote the other day, "Every time I have a problem, I try to imagine how you'd solve it."

"The Intern" also put Rocket Man in mind of a similarly-plotted but insufferably dreary Jack Nicholson movie of about a decade back titled, "About Schmitt." Jack did wind up hot-tubbed with Kathy Bates but in the main, "Schmitt" was mostly about later-life uselessness.

Not "The Intern." DeNiro's character and the actor himself tune keenly to the advantages of experience, even from a job that today practically defines obsolescence (he manufactured and marketed phone books.) He's sufferably, confidently cheery with a near Greek-chorus of traditional interns, one caught between a lease and a hard place. Eventually he welcomes the lad into his own digs. "I feel like everybody's uncle," DeNiro observes, with far more irony than regret.

He's assigned to "The Boss," Anne Hathaway. She distrusts people who blink infrequently and obsessively created this seemingly trending endeavor. She is not impressed, would rather have a wastebasket. Seeing her chauffeur tipping on duty, he slips protectively behind the wheel and makes himself invaluable, still to her dismay. He has gotten "too familiar," as Anne harbors some deep-seated guilt over the neglect she inflicts on her family, notably "house husband" Anders Holm.

She is, for our time, practically a descendant of "Poppins" proprietary Mr. Banks. She DOES seem to have time to give her home relationships more minutes, and she doesn't. Spoiler alert: It works out. DeNiro's wry sugar makes the medicine go down.

His wife died several years ago. Asked how long they were married, he replies "Not long enough," best line in the movie, thrown away with bitter-sweet resignation. Eventually, he falls into the clutches of message therapist Rene Russo, and anyone who objects to this later-life dalliance deserves a slap in the face.

"The Intern" is remarkably "clean" by today's standards, a heart-warmer for all ages, although the audience at Rocket Man's matinee consisted largely of his contemporaries. For all its familiarity, "The Intern," like Miss Poppins practically perfect in every way, deserves a promotion. NINE ROCKETS (out of 10).

Lions Club Elects Officers

The new North Buffalo Community Lions Club has elected its initial officers.

At their organizational meeting on October 12th, club members elected Wellington Avenue residents Pete Lang and Dale Danner as President and Secretary, respectively. Rounding out the initial slate, Paul Jones was selected as Treasurer and Cathy Ganci-Sunderlin as Membership Chair.

In an effort to further provide information about the club's community service focus, the officers, along with other club members, attended the Hertel Business Association's Meet and Greet at Mac's on Hertel the following evening. The event provided continued opportunity to inform residents and business leaders of the new Lions Club presence in North Buffalo. Membership has been increasing steadily since its introduction in August. It is anticipated that the club will be officially chartered by Lions Clubs International by the end of the year.

For interest in becoming a charter member, please contact the North Buffalo Community Lions Club at 20NHertelLions@gmail.com.

ADOPT A PET Sponsored By The Buffalo Rocket

This Week's Featured Friend: BERNICE

Say hello to Bernice!! Bernice is a wonderful adult lady that is a hit among the volunteers. She is loving, sweet, happy, and waiting patiently for her forever home. She is happy to hang out with her human friends and just watch the beauty of the world, and be that wonderful companion that so many people need. She has done amazing at the adoption events she has been at and everyone just melts at the sight of her face. Bernice loves going for walks, enjoys her treats, and if you have another canine family member, she would really like to meet them so they can figure out if they will be good housemates. Please consider this beautiful brindle beauty as an addition to your home and your life. Bernice promises to give you all the love you are looking for...
