Baseball Under A Dome!

Instructors for the North Buffalo Baseball Clinic: 1-r Alex Johnson, Jim Daley, Ken Smith, Mike Shatzel and Leugim Castillo.

By Bill Snyder

It's February and outside, the snow is deep and the wind is blowing.

But in North Buffalo, approximately 30 boys and girls are thinking about green grass and sunshine. That's why they've signed up for a North Buffalo Clinic this past week with two Major League Baseball players.

Alex Johnson and Leugim Castillo, two WNY natives are still in town before leaving for Arizona or Florida for Spring Training. They joined Hertel North Park Youth Baseball League Travel Director Jim Daley for a baseball clinic, teaching age seven to eleven years old North Buffalo kids the basics of America's Favorite Pastime.

They're running around basepaths, throwing a ball from the outfield and tagging out a runner at second base. "This is exactly what Major League Coaches do in Spring Training," said Alex Johnson, a former player himself of Hertel

Recruiting for Buffalo Police Explorers

Buffalo Police along with Buffalo Police Explorers (BPE) worked hard in 2020 to make a difference across Buffalo and are now recruiting for BPE for 2021. The Larkin Commerce Center has taken notice of their great work and donated space for the Buffalo Police Explorers to meet through 2021. Applications for BPE are being accepted until February 12 and the 16-week program starts February 16.

Buffalo Police Explorers get mentored by volunteer Buffalo Police Officers. Applicants must be between the ages of 14 and 20, live in the City of Buffalo, and must commit to meet 1-2 times a week. Leadership positions are elected by peers.

Buffalo Police Explorers

Advisor and Buffalo Police Officer, Joelle Bence urges the youth within the City of Buffalo to apply for BPE to build strong leadership and mentorship skills.

"Buffalo Police Explorers have a strong presence in the local community and we want to build on their work in 2021," Bence said. "The explorers are setting the example on how to build unity, safety, and trust in the City of Good Neighbors."

Buffalo Police Commissioner Byron W. Lockwood is proud of how the Buffalo Police Department instills the value of community service in Buffalo. He believes getting involved in community service on a daily basis

Feb. 22nd is National Walking Your Dog Day Five Joint Health Tips from Front of the Pack

If getting more exercise is amongst your 2021 goals, you may have a natural personal trainer right by your side. Dogs can be great motivation to make fitness a part of your daily routine by going for daily walks, which also happens to be a safe and healthy activity during COVID-19.

Front of the Pack, a canine supplement company, has made tracking your progress easy and worthwhile by sponsoring Best Friends Animal Society's ResQWalk app. Not only can walkers see their mileage, they can also designate a local shelter or animal welfare organization that raise money for with each step.

Of course, it's also important to prepare your

Ask Rusty- Avoiding WEP & GPO Reductions Pension?

Dear Rusty: I am a retired Texas teacher receiving my State pension. I retired in February 2009, before the end of a "loophole" which affected my future Social Security. I had earned enough credits to receive Social Security benefits in addition to my Teachers Retirement System (TRS) pension. At 62 I began getting my SS benefit (reduced by my TRS pension).

My husband didn't start his SS until last year, at which time I contacted Social Security so my benefits would "no longer be reduced" as per the TRS loophole. I have spoken with the local SS office three times and sent them the documents requested, but my SS payment remains the same! How do I bypass the local office to get my benefit increased to the amount I was told when I retired under this Texas loophole? Signed: Wanting My Increase

Dear Wanting: Your question requires some explanation of two SS rules known as the Windfall Elimination Provision (WEP) and the Government Pension Offset (GPO). These rules affect anyone, like you, with a pension from an employer which did not participate in Social Security, and who is also eligible for Social Security benefits. WEP applies to your personal SS retirement benefit; GPO applies to any spousal (or survivor) benefit you might become entitled to.

There are 27 States (including Texas) which, to varying degrees, have exempted some State employees from paying into Social Security. But for employees who, nevertheless, also become entitled to SS benefits, either from other SS-covered employment or a spouse, WEP and GPO will affect their SS benefits. Both rules apply to you because you did not contribute to Social Security while you earned most of your TRS pension. Your SS retirement benefit was reduced by WEP and, since your husband is now collecting SS, you might be entitled to an additional amount as his spouse, depending on whether the GPO will apply. The GPO did originally contain a "loophole," but the loophole didn't work as you think it did.

When the GPO was first enacted in 1977, it included a rule known as the "last day exemption." That rule stipulated that if, on your last day of employment prior to retirement, you contributed to both your non-covered pension and to Social Security under the same plan the GPO would not apply. State retirees in many of the 27 affected States took advantage of that loophole. That is, until Congress changed the GPO rule to eliminate the loophole.

A change in 2004 eliminated the "last day exemption" and replaced it with a rule saying that a GPO exemption would occur only if the employee contributed to both the non-covered pension and Social Security under the same plan every day for the last 5 years prior to retirement. A "transition" rule sometimes applied which allowed less than 5 years of contributions to both programs immediately prior to retirement. Each State decided if they would permit employees to take advantage of this option, which Texas did until just after you retired in 2009.

Your own WEP-reduced SS retirement benefit is not affected by, nor will it change because of any "loophole." Based upon the dates you shared, the "last day exemption" for GPO doesn't apply to you, but the changed rule may. The current rule permits a GPO exemption if you also contributed to Social Security under your TRS pension plan every day during the last five years of your TRS employment, or if the special "transition rule" applies to you. If that is the case, then you are, indeed, eligible for an exemption from the Government Pension Offset and your SS benefit will increase. But if not, the normal GPO spouse benefit reduction of 2/3rds of your TRS pension will be prorated and based only on the months you didn't pay into Social Security.

Since you've already contacted Social Security several times and sent them the requested documentation, I know of no way to "bypass" your local SS office. But it might help to ask your Congressional Representative to intervene by contacting the SSA and request that your case be expeditedexceeded the earnings limit.

New York Exodus

One of the headlines today in the news is the mass exodus of New Yorkers leaving New York for greener pastures. Last I heard it was approximately 1000 a day. Not sure if that is accurate but it sure seems like it down here in Florida. I almost feel like I am home in Western New York with all the New York license plates I see on the roadway here in the sunshine state. They even outnumber the Wisconsin plate as the Badger state always seemed to take first place as far as snow birds. For those who do not know "snow birds" is a term used to describe people who migrate south during the winter months and of which I am one. Have been doing the escape from the cold and snow now for almost 28 years. It is the better of two worlds. Beautiful Western New York summers and wonderful warm winter weather for months in Florida.

The last Super Bowl played in Tampa in 1991 before this one, did it. Watched the NY Giants beat the Buffalo Bills in the wide right game. This was my first exposure to warm weather in the middle of winter. Tampa was great but I found a little further south it is usually 10 degrees warmer in January. Went to one of those seminars where they pitch land in Florida for so much a month. Bought a lot in a one of these proposed development with a very little monthly payment. The development never really developed but it had streets, water and sewerage. I decided to build a house on the land and did for $47,000 in 1994. It was one of the only houses around but I had an escape from the dreary winter, and at least a place to go. Needless to say I later sold it at a good profit which led me to buy a better home in a better location. I am still in that house today.

One of the remarkable things I have noticed since semi-retiring and being able to spend at least four of the winter months in Florida is the enormous growth. With the continuous onslaught of not only "snow birds" but permanent residents how the state keeps up with the demand. What were two lane highways 20 years ago are now all divided four lanes. Roads and highways that were four are now six. Not to mention that what was nothing but woods is now beautiful landscaped divided scenic residential roads. All this work on the infra-structure was done to facilitate the increase in traffic and make it flow smoothly. Remember building a road in Florida is no big deal as the land is flat. No hills or valley just smooth level land to lay down a road easily. The only construction may be a bridge but even then they seem to go around any obstacle like that. If they need a road, they build it.

Needless to say property values have skyrocketed with the influx of New Yorkers. We have seen so many developments spring up since we have been here. These communities are like miniature cities, not only hundreds of homes but some have their own golf courses, restaurants, shopping centers, and even beaches. The thing is since land is becoming scarcer and expensive it seems that instead of single homes, the land is being used to build hundreds of condominiums. What used to be cow pastures are now mini high rise cities. In all cases the landscaping is extraordinary. Each development has to have run off for water and therefore have mini lakes. All these lakes have different kinds of water fountains. Like they are a signature of the development.

The building that is going on is overwhelming. Not only do they have enormous outdoor malls, within a few miles of each other, since we have been here they have actually built a couple of colleges. Used to be Florida was mostly for seniors who wanted to live out their lives in nice weather. Not so much anymore as not only is the population getting younger, but you actually see families with young kids moving in. These are year round residents who are taking advantage of the economic boom that has gripped the area. Florida is a wide open state even with the Pandemic. We all wear masks and social distance but it seems to be under control as much as can be expected. Right now it is the place to be.

There is a drawback. Hurricanes! These are not fun, but they only come in the summer months. I miss them like I miss the cold and snow of winter. I am glad I "miss" them.

We will continue to serve the community in this difficult time with Delivery and Pick Up Service.

Five Joint Health Tips from Front of the Pack

four-legged friend for any journey, according to veterinarian and Front of the Pack co-founder Dr. Stephanie Wenban.

"An estimated 66% of dog's across America today suffer from poor joint health. Our dog's are leading longer and more adventurous lives than ever before, so it is important to consider joint health from a young age," Dr. Wenban said. "There are preventative steps that can help to keep your dog active and mobile throughout his or her life."

Here are Dr. Wenban's top five veterinary tips for keeping your dog's joints healthy:

1. Start young: Over-exercise and feeding a diet that is not balanced for growing puppies can lead to changes in the growth plates and affect joint development. Which in later life will lead to joint disease. Controlled, regular exercise and a good quality puppy diet will set your puppy up for good joint health into the future.

2. Vary exercise: Try to vary the strain your dog's joints are under by varying their exercise patterns. For example, try to mix it up between soft and hard surfaces regularly. Also try to vary the type of exercise your dog gets, as daily repetition of certain activities such as chasing a ball can lead to joint problems into the future.

3. Watch their weight: Overweight dogs are around 3 times more likely to experience joint disease, such as arthritis and ruptured cruciate ligaments. Carrying extra weight leads to extra strain on the joints, so one of the best things you can do to help in preventing and alleviating joint disease is to keep your dog trim.

4. Regular veterinarian visits: Veterinarians are trained to spot even the most subtle differences in how your dog moves, so at least twice yearly visits to the vet should be essential. Spotting the early signs of discomfort and starting early treatment can help to delay the progression of joint disease, and keep your dog far more comfortable.

5. Supplements: Glucosamine and Chondroitin can help to preserve the spongy cartilage that provides an essential cushioning for joints. Other supplements such as Omega-3 fatty acids and Curcumin can help to balance inflammatory systems within the body and joints. One dog supplement that contains Glucosamine, Chondroitin, Omega-3 fatty acids and Curcumin is Move by Front Of The Pack.

Say, you don't have a dog to walk with? If you're ready to take the step of finding a new best friend, there are thousands of amazing dogs waiting for you to foster or adopt them at a local shelter or rescue. To get started, visit www.bestfriends.org.

VA Western New York Healthcare System with genuine notes of thanks for their service.

"In these times, this is a great community service project for students," stated Kearns. "It is an opportunity for them to learn what it means to be a veteran and why veterans, both past and present, should be honored for protecting the freedoms we enjoy in this country."

In past years, this project would be coordinated with an Erie County Clerk's "Thank-A-Vet" Discount Card Program event where students would be invited to present the handmade cards to the veterans in attendance. As the COVID-19 pandemic continues, all in-person events have been put on hold until further notice. Never the less, County Clerk Kearns wanted to ensure another successful Valentine's for Vets event to show continued appreciation to the veteran community.

community.

Kearns collected and delivered these cards personally, just in time for Valentine's Day, to veterans during a tour of the VA WNYHS's COVID-19 vaccination process, coined locally by VA staff as, "Operation New Hope".

"I want to thank Principal Johnson, Public School #54-George Blackman School of Excellence, Principal Cecchini, Public School #17-Early Childhood Center and all the students, and teachers associated with those Buffalo Public Schools. Also participating, Mrs. Darnley's 3rd grade class from John A. Sciole Elementary School in Depew," said Kearns. "I truly appreciate the time and effort taken to coordinate this heartfelt effort in making 'Valentines for Veterans' a huge success. By receiving a handmade Valentine's Day greeting from a student while at the hospital truly meant the world to our veterans."
